I chose the word "peers" very carefully and deliberately here. I anticipated that you would want to define who your "peers" are, and that they would not be us.

As I noted previously, "Your very public (mis)conduct here is more than enough evidence for your peers to judge," regardless of who you define your "peers" to be.

To repeat what I said previously, which should be clear enough to everyone else on this newsgroup:

"I can't predict for certain in advance what the final form of a moderated newsgroup would be, or if it would even be voted into existence on the first attempt. Specific approval/disapproval of articles would have to wait for submission of those articles, and would have to be decided upon by the moderation team, not just me.

However, other moderated newsgroups that are considered successful usually consider the following behavior to be grounds for a temporary or permanent ban:

- Provocation/Prevarication

- Arguing against those that agree with you (i.e., arguing for the sake of arguing)/Filibustering/'Grease' (extending debate by avoiding direct rejoinder)

- Name-calling/uncivil tone/disrespect for newsgroup participants

- Trying to argue both ways/applying different standards of evidence to yourself versus others

- Trying to justify the above behavior with, 'But he started it!'

In particular, I don't think there's a moderator of any existing newsgroup that would accept the last argument as justification."

And if you think that these standards, if adopted, would be unfairly applied only to you, you would be quite mistaken.

I'm sure that you'll have plenty of comments once the RFD is posted here.

Considering the dictionary definition of quibble (http://dictionary.reference.com/browse/quibble):

-noun
1. an instance of the use of ambiguous, prevaricating, or irrelevant language or arguments to evade a point at issue.
2. the general use of such arguments.
3. petty or carping criticism; a minor objection.
-verb (used without object)
4. to equivocate.
5. to carp; cavil.

the term "true quibble" is an oxymoron, and likely a "meta-quibble" of its own.

Unless you're trying to argue that it truly was a quibble, in which case I will agree.

Order of the Holey Sockpuppet

A special Kookternity comprised of those most prolific in the art of, albeit thinly, disguising their net.presence behind whatever nose and glasses they can concoct. A Kook Art that came into its own, and received its name, from the work of the late purveyor to the cotton-bound masses, Earl Curley.

On account of his morphing sock-puppetry in Google and talking to his socks as though they were other posters (in spite of the unlikely scenario that a bunch of people in Reston, Virginia have unilaterally chosen to post to RRAP, using only nyms which lame other regulars in that same group, and all of them replyable, at that, since they are always posted through Google), I, Snarky, do hereby nominate for the Order of the Holey Sockpuppet: the poster known as "Wabbit".

Are YOU qualified? We gather more information about our environment from vision than any other sense. Now, that's NOT to say that we have the best vision in the animal kingdom. Our vision is refined and depended on at the expense of our other senses. Ever have a pet cat or dog that was blind and deaf? I have and you would be surprised how well then can adapt with just the sense of smell and touch alone.

Humans need some degree of assistance.

Why would I want to leave usenet? You're not making any sense. Want to you shouldn't be able to.

This is an strawman. You know full well what I mean.

I'll tell my daughter's occupational therapist to quit using a monitor screen to teach her how to recognize emotions of people's faces pictured on the screen. After all, I have just been told that you can't view a persons mood by the look on his face if it is composed of pixels on a screen.

>When you actually get into high school, let us know.

That was uncalled for and childish. Your arguments are based on a false premise that I and other want to ban the use of CW or that it is useless. We're only opposed to it being required to pass a test. I question those who say it's as good as a human voice. It isn't and you can't say otherwise. Romanticize it all you want. It is what it is.
Nothing more.

We gather more information from fellow humans by words than by any other means. And words aren't processed in the visual cortex, not even written words.

Apples and oranges. Deaf-blind people get along pretty well too, if they're given food, water and all the comforts of home by someone else.

>Why would I want to leave usenet?

You don't like CW because you can't tell emotions on CW. Since you can't tell emotions on Usenet, you evidently don't like Usenet. Or you're being inconsistent.

That's what this discussion is about, so I guess the grandmother story

it. Did you forget what you were talking about?

Since I can fully communicate using "emotionless beeps", no.

No you haven't, but you're being told that if you're not being

The original discussion was about requiring it, not banning it. My

So be opposed to testing altogether. Oh, there's already a way to get on the air without a test. You just don't like that way. Now that's being childish.

Sure I can - I understand and use it - you don't, so you can't intelligently discuss what it is or isn't at all.

Hmmm...could be...except the anony-mouse Arf a Man didn't mention
"seven hostile actions," didn't talk about Civil Air Patrol (as "pilot in command" Har!), and didn't mention any pedofilia or scatology, didn't want to "talk" to others' wives!

I'd say that this anony-mousie could be just about ANY Jimmie Noserve doesn't know that. Obviously. He's never taken that Oath.

Jimmie Noserve never served. Not in the military, not in any of his governments. He thinks of "the military" as G.I. Joe dolls ("action figures") or as images of old war movies?

Indeed!

Jimmie Noserve must be connected with aviation somehow...he is on some higher plane. He is "better" than the rest of us.

Good grief...this NO-serve individual just cannot stop trying

Just the same, he never took that Oath to serve his country, putting his life on that line, possibly harming his precious body dedicated to morse code.

Oh, wait, here must be the meaning of his words: It is okay to be a civilian government employee (such as that glorious DX king from State, retired)...but NOT okay to wear the uniform of a military branch of the USA, doing military things and putting their LIVES on the line! Military people are "subsidized" but those in the "foreign service" are NOT!

Yes, that's about it. Heil is his "friend" and ostensible "protector." Heil was a government employee at State. Heil is a pro-coder amateur extra. It all fits now.

Anyone who is a pro-coder and served in the military is NOT "subsidized" but all no-coders aren't worthy of any respect from pro-coders, are always "subsidized," never do things on their own, got ALL education from the government, and probably have underarm odor.

But, it is "okay" whatever Jimmie Noserve says. If you don't like it he will keep on keep on keep on rationalizing whatever he said is "correct" until everyone gives in just to keep him quiet. :-(

There is a lot more information in our environment than just raw data.

My turn to say apples and oranges then. Can you quote where I said that I didn't like CW? Basically, I say that it's only good for submitting raw data, like usenet. Didn't say that it was a bad thing, just not a full, complete way to engage in human discourse. It should also not be a barrier to the use of amateur radio.

No that was NOT my point. Let me be more precise: The inflection added by actual voice results in a conversation that is much more than the sum of it's parts, the parts being the words used. My grandmother example simply showed that inflection adds so much more to a conversation that it can, at times, convey some information on it's own without words.

Raw data [text] is all that's needed for this conversation.

You insist on reducing the term "communication" to just an exchange of data. I am trying to point out that there is MUCH more to human interactions than just data.

The fact that I fully support technical testing is well established.
Others who want to end code testing generally feel the same way. This is well established.

Really, the answer is "No." Lived away from home for quite awhile, moved back for about ten weeks, and am now on my own again. Hey, prove me a liar, whydon'tcha.

Hey, Snarky, tell us more about your first sexual experience. What happened to make you refrain from sex for 16 years? Did she say something unkind about you? Did you come on her trousers? Did she tell you your peepee was too small?

When you say you did lots of reading in those years, what do you mean, Playboy? Amputee Monthly? NAMBLA Journal?

So it's been two years now, hunh? Must be lots of pressure building up in the Snarky ballsack! How does it feel, Snark?

Oh, btw, you can insult my girlfriends all you like, you know nothing

AUK FAQ (enhanced for accuracy)*
Q1: Is 'Snarky' a bald, fat, bloodcurdlingly ugly, unemployed, 37 year old usenet junkie and layabout who still lives off his parents and desperately needs a life?

A1: Yes.

Yes, Leonard, falsely. You were incorrect. You were wrong.

Your denial looks a little silly. The person who brought up Jeff Herman and launched into the diatribe about the ARRL Handbook is Leonard H.
Anderson! By doing so, another pound of flesh was extracted from your 70-something-year-old hide. Are you losing weight through the factual error plan?

Could a sock puppet be considered a pseudonym, Len? It doesn't matter what its age happens to be.

You had little choice.

You'd have us to understand that anyone who doesn't find it mildly amusing is anal retentive, easily furious (whatever that is), ouver touchy and/or a "we-must-have-ONLY-our-way individual". I'd say that a guy who makes that kind of statement about what he finds mildly amusing is guilty of those things of which he accuses others.

Why should that be so interesting. After all, you've devoted much, much more time and many, many more words into attempting to chastise others.

I see you as a guy who requires lots of flattering, Len. The trouble is that you don't get much of it here. That chafes you.

That type of thing has become a real problem here. Eighty or ninety percent of it could be cleaned up by eliminating just one individual--Roger L. Wiseman. He is a problem child under his multiple sock puppets on usenet (not only in this newsgroup) and he has been a problem child in amateur radio. His behavior and Mark Morgan's Myna bird replies don't excuse your behavior.

Well, Paul has a LOT to learn about moderating. I'm speaking from experience of years of moderating several BBS discussion boards locally. I wisely learned NOT to take part in any "pissing contests" in public...or private in order to do that.

Those moderators who could not help themselves and got into one-sided public squabbles either quit in anger or got removed by the Sysop. I only quit when the BBSs went out of business due to Internet competition.

So far, it looks like Schleck is gunning ONLY for me.
I can't prove any reason for that other than the postings in this "news thread" of "Gerritsen sentenced."
I have several suspicions, though. :-)

I'll say this, though. NOBODY that doesn't talk nice-nice about present-day conditions in US amateur radio is going to have a snowball's chance in hell of ever getting into public view. One can take that to the bank (and get interest on it). EVERYONE has to be kind to all in the moderating team, call them by titles or suitable honorifics. [one can envision saying "sir" in response to all written text, perhaps saluting in some form is required?] It's fairly certain that amateur extra licensees will be exempt, regardless of what they post and to whom. All others will be graded by license class with those not licensed in amateur radio being at the very bottom...with me totally blocked out. <shrug>

It will be okay if an amateur extra calls others by 'cutesy' names, demeans and denigrates their work, what they've done, accuses them of pedophilia or homosexual conduct, calls for 'consultation' with their wives, insults their wives, even manages to insult two large universities as being "correspondence schools." That's okay since he has a "military" rank in the Civil Air Patrol.

It will be okay if another amateur extra demeans military personnel and insults them by saying they are "subsidized" by the government...even though he never served, never volunteered, hasn't even been in government employ. Such an amateur extra is free to demand whatever he wants of anyone challenging him. He need not defend his demands for He IS an extra.

Who MIGHT get blocked may (no assurances of this) be the anonymous trolls, misfits, and general filth-babblers behaving like middle-school adolescent males discovering that they can cuss out adults in perfect safety. I'm really not sure if the "moderating team" will be able to judge these, because they minute one of them mumbles nice-nice about amateur radio as the team does it, they might allow them to post?

It's all in what is said and who says it. Never EVER be forceful in defending your position here, Mark. The mear hint of it going against the establishment of olde-tyme hams will get you labeled with "(mis)conduct."

I haven't engaged in a diatribe, Len. I've asked you direct question about something you'd apparently like to convey. It has no meaning to me. If it is one of your petty insults, I'm not able to be insulted if I don't know what you mean.

Tsk, I don't think so. Despite alluding to prescient powers, you could not possibly know what I was about to write. :-)

Who you mean by "us," white man? I've been a moderator on more than one public discussion board on each of three BBSs.
When you say "us" then you cannot restrict that to the "moderating team" to be. I was doing moderating successfully before this newsgroup came into being. You really don't want to know that, I can tell.

>As I noted previously, "Your very public (mis)conduct here is more than >enough evidence for your peers to judge," regardless of who you define >your "peers" to be.

Your definition of "peers" seem to be solely the "moderating team" and any olde-tymers in US amateur radio who've passed the 20 WPM code test. I will NEVER fit into THAT peer group.
:-) <guffaw, not just a little smiley>

Neither will I fit any "peer group" that self-righteously maintains the OLD standards and practices, pretending to be professionals in an amateur activity. 'Maintenance' of the old allegedly on 'traditional' rationalizations but really meaning Their personal preferences which they attempt to force on all others.

I will not fit into any "peer group" of inflated egos with pretentious titles-rank-priveleges by which They imagine are some kind of uberamateur and great radio guru... especially those titles-rank-privileges which were lobbied for by even earlier pretentious amateurs wanting to be "professional amateurs."

I will not fit into any bigoted group that makes fun of and insults any other radio service in the USA...just because they don't follow some "amateur way."

I will not fit into any "peer group" of non-serving elites who don't understand that real service to their country is not by having a radio hobby...it means owning up to some maturity and, when necessary, putting their LIFE on the line. Voluntarily, but have accepted draftees who also served.

I DO fit into a peer group that has an interest in radio and electronics but doesn't need the emotional blanket of rank-status-title to justify it. I not only FIT that but have long worked in that environment...my career of choice as I've explained in here. I've had NO problems getting along with THAT peer group for a half century. But, in this newsgroup best described as a Din of Inequity, some deem themselves "boss" and demand some kind of strict obediance, indeed quasi-patriotism, to the status quo.
There's been verbal "combat" in here for years, by the few of the hamatuer order faithfulling echoing (or parroting) the words of a minority membership organization. Some of us spoke back at those! How terrible! We went against the Big Brother of America!

Did you think public discussion forum moderation is some kind of "new" thing? It's been going on since the early 1970s, even on the ARPANET-turned-Usenet as well as BBSs. Precedent EXISTS, has existed for decades.

But, I can't tell you that, ey? Nope. You've tasted the "power of control" and are a bit drunk on it. Understand.
Been there, done that, quit trying to drink that control stuff quickly. That control liquor will bend your mind faster than alcohol. You've got to do some steps to learn sensitivity to what folks write in here, tune into their intent, see what they "really" say. And, above all AVOID GETTING INTO PUBLIC PISSING CONTENTS. That only makes you (or any "team" member) one-sided, good for nothing else but pissing in public. You are not "relieved" to know that but that's the plain, simple fact.

>However, other moderated newsgroups that are considered successful >usually consider the following behavior to be grounds for a temporary or >permanent ban:

Why tell ME, Paul. I can expect nothing but a permanent block of anything I write in this moderated forum. <shrug>

You already give clear indication of such blockage. "In spades" I might add. :-)

>And if you think that these standards, if adopted, would be unfairly >applied only to you, you would be quite mistaken.

Blah, blah, blah. You've singled ME out. Many, many OTHERS haven't even been mentioned, not even alluded to. I am as good as shut out for the future.

Whatever happened to all those OTHERS in here? Is your browser broken? Do your eyes glaze over when you see those posts, make you unable to comprehend them?

Case in point: You've written about MY "(mis)conduct."
"misconduct" of WHAT? You've not posted any "conduct" rules that MUST be followed. Yet you've tossed in that "(mis)conduct" statement twice. What you've done is to make me "guilty" of some law well before that law became law! Haw!

The "moderating team" will MAKE the "laws" of this forum whether or not they would be fair or unfair. One thing
I know for damn sure is that I won't be able to post.

You don't want those "guilty of misconduct (or "(mis)conduct") you want those who make nice-nice to the elite of amateur radio as she are known now. Absolutely NO ONE will be allowed to remain for the slightest negative statement against the olde-tyme establishment, especially those who fail to respect, honor TITLES. No contentiousness of any kind!
The slightest hint of contentiousness will result in banishment. Understood. I've seen that elsewhere. On short-lived groupings who took the same path.

>You're still not getting a "73" from me.

I could care less.

The ready-built Personal Computer first appeared in 1976, 30 years ago (the "IBM PC" debuted in 1980, 26 years ago).
The Internet went public in 1991, 15 years ago.
"Restructuring" to drop the morse test rate to 5 WPM for all such tests happened only 6 years ago.

The peak licensing of 737,938 happened on 2 Jul 03, just 3 years ago. [they've been dropping at an average of 7K per year ever since]

I disagree on your reasons stated in your quote above.

>When I ask technical people about why they haven't >acquired an interest in amateur radio, I never get the CW requirement >as a response.

Strange, I hear that response. Having been IN radio-electronics for over a half century, I DO know some "technical people." :-)

Manual radiotelegraphy was a MUST to use early radio as a communications medium. The technology of early radio was primitive, simple, and not yet developed.
On-off keying was the ONLY practical way to make it possible to communicate. Morse code was then already mature and a new branch of communications was open to use by downsized landline telegraphers.

> They simply view the whole service as outmoded in the >face of modern telecommunications.

PART of that IS true. NOT all of it.

What IS outmoded (technically) is sitting only on HF and "working" other stations with morse radiotelegraphy.
Amateur radio is the ONLY radio service still using morse radiotelegraphy for communications purposes.

Another thing outmoded is the strict "necessity" to use a formalism in "procedure" AS IF it was "professional" radio. That formalism was established between 50 to 70 years ago. Amateur radio, by definition, is NOT professional. Too many olde-tymers want to PRETEND they are pros in front of their ham rigs.

But, there is still an enormous area of the EM spectrum that is still open for experimentation, for just the fun of doing something out of the ordinary above 30 MHz. That can be a very different RF environment, much much different than the technology available in the 20s and 30s. It has exciting possibilities...except for the rutted and mired olde-tymers unable to keep up with new things, secure in their own dreams of youth and simple technological environment.

>Let's face it.. the romance is gone.

Oh, boo hoo...the "romance" of the 1930s is gone? Yes, it IS. The "pioneering of the airwaves" below 30 MHz has been DONE...mostly by the pros of radio (despite what the ARRL claims). DONE a long time ago. The solid-state era came into being about 45 years ago and has revolutionized ALL electronics (radio is a subset of that).

Except as memorabilia trinkets of the past, GONE is the analog VFO, GONE is the one-tube regenerative receiver, GONE is the single-crystal-single-frequency Tx, GONE is the big, bulky AM modulator amplifier, GONE is the not-knowing-when-the-bands-are-open (solar activity and ionosonding solved that and HF MUF is a predictable item that can be found by a computer program). Except for the boatanchor afficionados, vacuum tubes are GONE for nearly everything but high-power transmitters.

The radio world of today is NOT that of 1950, nor of 1960, nor 1970, nor even 1980s. It keeps changing, advancing, the state of the art never static. For the stuck-in-the-mud olde tymers that is terrible...they feel insecure on not being able to keep up, become aggressive to newcomers ("no kids, lids or space cadets") and retreat to the "secure" mode of their youth, "CW." But, they want to make sure They get the respect they feel they've "earned" (as if) so they try and try and try to bring all down to THEIR level...the code test MUST stay..."because."

There are 100 million two-way radios in use in the USA alone, millions more in other countries. Those are the cellular telephones. There are millions of VHF and UHF transceivers in the USA, working daily for public safety agencies, ships, private boats, air carriers as well as private airplanes. There are tens of thousands of HF transceivers in use in the USA, users being everyone from government agencies to private boat owners, ALL exclusive of amateur radio users. Where is the "romance" in all this Plenty from a cornucopia that all have grabbed? It is GONE, yes.

But, NEW "romances" await. DIFFERENT ones, I'd say a helluva lot more complex than old, simple "radio." We can't relive old "romances" except in our minds and we can't grow physically younger. Only person-to-person romance is TRUE, the other "romance" is of the imagination, of the fantasy of what was once there. This fantasy "romance" can't be brought back. It can't be legislated into remaining static. The rules and regulations have to change to keep up with the NOW.

If you really are an amateur operator, why can't you give out

How DOES one have a "reasoned debate" with an anony-mousie such as "Nada Tapu"?

I've not seen that such is possible in here except for two and both of them are self-admitted Canadians.

You really need to find something with which to fill your empty hours.

Whereas there is not much likely to keep you quiet. You are bound to demonstrate the accuracy of the well known profile.

Mark is overly sensitive about bloody farts. Forgive him. He has more than once gone on record in these newsgroups by telling us that he has a hemorrhoid problem and, get this....uses beer to give himself enemas. He has not told us just HOW he introduces the beer into his anus, so your guess is as good as mine. He claims that the beer enema lessens the pain, but I suspect it is most likely a cheap and semi-perverted means of getting a buzz going.

Nah...that's just an old, old trick of J. Miccolis. He diverts attention away from a challenge by another (and usually on a different subject) to get the group focussing on some old, old newsgripe argument. He does that deliberately.

"Magic" is a subjective term. The "magic" of HF worldwide comms dissolved into reality for me in 1953 on seeing such wholesale "magic" working 24/7 in tying US Army (and other military) into the large network going back to the states.

"Different strokes for different folks."

ARRL is still fixated on HF and the "magic" of morse. Since they influence (if not brainwash) as many US hams as they can with their huge publishing effort, we aren't supposed to negatively critique them. That's "not nice" to those who've had their brains washed in that way.

I've seen "real" magic at the Magic Castle in Hollywood, CA. That's mainly a professional association of magicians/illusionists. One can't gain entrance without being admitted by a member. I've had the marvelous opportunity to go in three times there...and be totally fascinated by the illusions. Whenever I see some ham bring up "magic" I think of the Magic Castle. A lot of hams ascribe "magic" to HF comms but that is their own private illusion (or delusion, as the case may be). Shrug. To each his own but I don't like others trying to cram Their delusions into everyone.

The robeswine picked it up thinking it was SOP. Jimmie the M. probably picked it up on the old (defunct) AOL discussion board and saw it was useful for him as a misdirection. It's an old, old trick and - surprisingly - works well with the uninitiated.

Welp, 2000 miles away from you the weather was nice down here. Picked up new glasses from Sears Optical and passed the Armed Forces Career Center just outside the Sears entrance. Briefly had some nice words with the same Army E-5 on duty that I did on Tuesday. :-)

Well then, let's get Heil to work with NASA. He wrote he "worked RRAP is dead for any real discussion. Pro-coders won't allow it.

That's IT in a nutshell. Pro-coders want to stop all discussion.
It is obvious to any disinterested observer. Problem is the "moderating team" (well, one anyway) wants to be in the public engaging in a pissing contest. Ah, but with just ONE, me. :-)

The hypocrisy will be proven later, after the "moderation" starts.

As far as I saw, Bill Clinton NEVER had to face the elite "moderating team" of RRAP! :-)

True, yes. Interesting that you should have that insight, really, considering that Ward has been able to control _your_ posting habits for ages.

Clealy, Sir is under the impression that AUK is expected to adhere to truces which involve only RMCR, when in fact the x-poasting to RMCR from AUK has continued all along. I've made damn sure of that. However, no other AUK regs have unilaterally started any x-poasts to RMCR.

Very wrong. They both reproduced your outer filth without editing it -- repeatedly -- thus they both wear the mantle.

Indeed not. He has displayed some minor kooksigns, and may in fact be one, after all -- though, as time passes and he continues to refrain from meltdowns, that becomes less likely.

> but out of a pathological fear of being outer filthed yourself.

Ah, no. My full legal name is online, somewhere, and a sufficiently diligent stalker could find it (meanwhile, I'm fully capable of removing it from its current location, yet I still have not done so). So far, that stalker is not you, <wfh_jr>, Harrington, Richard M. Scoville, Dean Humphries, Jason "Gortician" Christie, Dustin Cook, Charles S. Lysaght, Woger Wiseman (or his protege, "Wabbit"), or any of the various others who think it's a demonstration of their 1337 hacker skillz to find out someone's full legal name and personal contact info, and then post it to usenet, especially in subject lines, particularly x-poasted. In reality, it's a kooksign. A major one.

That's a very cute self-justification for your k00ky behaviour, but I'm afraid it doesn't wash. You're Outer Filth, just like the other guys I litsed.

Oh, good.

However, the interest is in yourself, most of all, due to the k0oKy manner in which you chose to present your kook. You really ought to have read the FAQ first, as it informs one as to both the proper and improper methods of presentation. The difference, you see, is between getting your k00k nominated, and being nominated as a k00k yourself. Many others who've only just posted to AUK for the first time in the past two months or so were not nearly so rash, and their kooks have, in many cases, been nominated, though at least one other took a path similar to yours, and won the Golden Killfile. Meanwhile, his kook is now up for the Bartlo, so it sometimes works out anyway. So far, not for you.

The only way you could "keep me in rmcr forever" would be if you could prevent me from wandering off to do something else whenever I feel like it. I've done that several times, in the past five years alone, and there's no telling when I'll do it again. Maintaining AUK's interest in RMCR will take a lot more than keeping one kookologist x-poasting -- indeed, it is a measure of your failure as a troll that you have only managed a decent conversation with a single AUK'er, since, as a k00k, you have but a single major credit (aside from winning three awards) to your name: Being Outer Filth.

Not. Google "Snarky", January-June, 2006 (or 2005, for that matter, and in 2004, I never posted at all -- and I started back in October 1999). Even when my nick doesn't turn up in my sig, my email munge/address, or my screenname, people who know me refer to me as such. Incidentally, more than one friend, online and off-, calls me "Snarkles", entirely out of a personal preference for it -- I never bill myself that way. Are you suddenly feeling friendly towards me?? Well, ew.

No, on the contrary, I quite enjoy usenet. A number of people may prefer that I stop enjoying it so much, but I pay no attention to the needs or wants of k00ks.

> In short, Snarkles, you need help. The almost physical pain you feel on

As it happens, I detest beer -- the smell and taste of it are both vomit-inducing, so I haven't touched it since 1988, when I last gave it a real chance.

Well, for a dead guy, I'm having a lot of fun on usenet. Did you see "Wabbit's" recent meltdown, which I x-poasted to rmcr elsewhere in this thread? Took a number of weeks to get him to that point, but I did it.

Yes, the non-CB amateur bands tend to be a little more mature than the citizens band (or at least as far as the Washington/Clark/Multnomah/Clackamas County area is concerned).
Unfortunately, Usenet and the Internet are not. If you don't believe me, go watch Dateline when they sting Internet weirdos sometime to see the

Not to sideline your obtuse "get help" posts Mark, but may I ask a personal question?
When you self-administer your beer enemas, how do you do so? Do you use warm beer or cold? Do you use a funnel and surgical tubing or do you simply upend your arse over the back of a chair, spread your cheeks and pour the beer into your cavity? Do you insert the entire can or do you prefer a long-neck bottle? I realize that I am asking highly personal questions, but never in my life have I ever met anybody who has ever had the stupidity to confess and discuss such matters.
In fact, I've never spoken to anybody who admits to using beer as an enema. You are a first.

Oh, and I have to ask. Which brand to you prefer? Is Lager better than say, Miller Lite? Come Easter, have you ever tried some of the dark beers? I suppose you prefer Lite as opposed to some of the local ales. I guess the dark beers foam too much and may leave telltale stains.
And Mark, how do you do this? Do you go to the local tavern, belly up to the bar, drop your pants while plopping your arse on the bar while telling the bartender to "fill er' up"? Does the barkeep have a small hose under the bar with your name on it?

Nahhhh....I'm sure you keep your beer enemas to yourself, don't you? You wouldn't want everybody on Usenet knowing about your home treatment.
I'd like to buy you a beer Mark. It would be a hoot to watch and well worth the cost.

Actually Len, almost all amateur radio operation has been outmoded by advancing technology which has made amateur radio first to be redundant and later to be obsolete. I'm still using the same modes for amateur radio that I used more than half a century ago.

My daughter lives in New York state. 50 years ago,
I would have tried to talk her into getting a ham license. Today, Sprint cellphones allow the two of us to communicate any time, day or night, for free.

How could anything about you be useful, asshole? It's quite clear you didn't leave home until long after most of your contemporaries had

107. Fair Question For Dyslexic Hams

Newsgroup: rec.radio.amateur.policy

These are serious questions I have of CW operation, with no harm, malice, hurt, or put-downs intended for anyone, so I hope this thread does not degrade to that point.

When listening to CW on my scanner, are there any tell-tale indications that the operator is dyslexic? Does a dyslexic ham use the same speed, protocol and " short-hand/short-form wording " as a more proficient ham would use in communicating CW? Do dyslexic hams ever really use CW, or would dyslexic hams ever even consider the use of CW on a regular basis? Are dyslexic would-be hams able to pass the CW portion of an exam to get into a higher class of license and increased privileges?

I meant these as very real and serious questions. I have a dyslexic daughter which I'm still trying to comprehend and understand by trying to view reality as she sees it. Wifey and I are somewhat still feeling guilty of having eroded her self-esteem when we were raising her by using usual methods of discipline when she screwed-up excessively, until we finally realized that there was a very real problem that needed dealing with, but in non-usual ways. This is 25 years later, and I still feel like shit about the situation and go way out of my usual way to help her without making the other 3 siblings feel left out, so maybe we should lighten up on some of the dyslexic guys/gals in these newsgroups for having the balls to be here in the first place, let alone wanting to communicate with those who do not have a dyslexia problem.

More power to the dyslexics...I think they should be made to feel welcome. The crappy name-calling should stop, though.

Jack

No...YOU have carried on about being a child molester.

I keep telling you I am willing to leave the unsubstantiated comments of a drop, but YOU keep bringing them back up, Morkie.

Me doth think you protesteth too much...

In other words, I bet there's more to it than the investigator in Illiopolis let on, and that YOU know he's probably aware of it too!

No one said it did.

He SAID "It is because of mentally bereft people such as Mark that abortionists will never want for customers"...

He was spot-on.

Just be glad that post-puberty abortions are illiegal. I'd sign

...Nope..." high " was the last word, and I left out a " dot " on the last "
h " to make it an " s " as in " higs " instead of " high " . Just testing

The two of you jerks have made a cesspool out of .misc and .policy. Take this crap to the sewer you have made for yourselves and don't foul this nest with your rantings and ravings.

To the op, I realize the question was asked in sincerity, and I don't have a good answer.

Did you ever hear of a shuttle transatlantic landing site (TAL), Len?
Did you know that one of them is Banjul in The Gambia? Were you aware that Dakar, Senegal was also used in the past? It happens that Guinea-Bissau, that cashew exporting country, is just a little down the coast from The Gambia. I worked in Bissau for the U.S. government in communications. Let's see if you are capable of putting two and two together and coming up with a correct answer.

Working with NASA isn't the same as working for NASA.

Your factual errors are mounting.

Well, Leonard "I-am-only-here-for-civil-debate" Anderson, you've come up with a mistaken notion. What is needed is a removal of filth posters, endless Myna bird droppings of "get help", "gte help", "kooks on

I think it is admirable that one radio amateur is concerned about the DXCC totals of another. Mark also shows concern for whether I'm getting enough sleep.

I want to assure him that I'm not missing any rare, needed DX and that I get plenty of sleeps and even sneak in an occasional nap.

Mark sees you as Steve and Wiseman sees me as Stagger Lee. Both of them thrive on sock puppets of their own. Each is readily identifiable no matter which sock puppet he uses.

That is true in essence for all those who "work DX on HF with CW." :-)

Some will point to modern techniques in radio (DDS, PLL frequency control, solid-state PAs that need no tuning controls, etc.) as being advancements. Trouble is, those advancements came from the designers-manufacturers, advancements to capture market share of ham consumer electronics. Using only on-off keying with a state-of-the-art transceiver seems a waste of available resources in that equipment.

> My daughter lives in New York state. 50 years ago,

One in three Americans has a cell phone now according to the US Census Bureau. Each cell phone is basically a little two-way radio.

No "CW" test is needed to use a cell phone. :-)

I just completed an exchange of files (including hi-resolution photographs) this morning with another in Europe. Took only a few minutes. The Internet stretches over most of the globe, is unaffected by any ionospheric variation. Those files couldn't be exchanged via "CW" on HF. [maybe the "phase shift" impairs such information transfer...:-)]

No "CW" test is needed to use the Internet. :-)

But, in 2006 the FCC regulations still require any radio amateur to test for "CW" in order to operate on bands below 30 MHz. None of the other radio services require that. <shrug>

Heh. But, in here, coders are the only ones with "facts." Anything
a no-coder says is "wrong," "in error" and other endearments. :-)

True enough. But...the coders HAVE their rank-status-

All must do as they did or be called "wrong" or "in error."

Early radio was just a telegraph system without poles and wires between stations. Mythical tales have turned early radio into something greater than rocket science.

whether or not it works for communications! :-)

It's about the same as those who love to Re-Enact the American Civil War or the American Revolutionary War.
Play-acting at "pioneering" over 8 decades after that frequency region was picked for the first maritime distress

"Ore" from a mine. The pro-coders say "I've got mine, nya-nya."

It's getting to be "Back to the Future, Part Infinity" if things like the Great 500 KHz Experiment is a sign of things to come from the "representative of all amateurs" in Newington.

Their other "Experiment" is a "contest" to see who can best come up with a whole ham station for LESS than $50 in new part costs. Whoever "wins" that gets a really hefty prize of $100 cash and Publication in QST! Oh, and it is 40 meters only, but "allows" SSB voice to be included. :-)

CW is my favorite mode. I'm a member of FISTS (8741).
Strange that I helped design the 8741 at Intel, huh?

Vanilla Bean ice cream is my favorite ice cream. But I wouldn't dream of forcing my favorite ice cream on anyone else, including my fellow amateur radio

It is true of those who listen to the medium wave broadcast band and the

No, Len, it isn't. No license exam at all is required. You are qualified to use a cell phone. If you want to work some DX, you are free to see how far from a tower you can be and still make one work.

You can even set up a random dialer in order to fish for "contacts". :-)

Wow! I wonder why that might be. Do you suppose that it is because that most of the internet is linked by wires and the parts that aren't use frequencies that are capable only of relatively short distances where ionospheric variations aren't applicable? As with cell phone use, you meet the qualifications to use the internet.

Then perhaps amateur radio is the wrong radio service for you. You might choose one which doesn't require testing and which will permit you to exchange high speed digital data.

some dylesxic do manage to pass. I know of No dylexic ham that use CW on air at all, at least not for very long

MyselfI used to operate it using keyboard provide code paractice for some friends (anyone that can follow my typing rendered in CW) can pass a test at the same speed it will not stop the name calling is the only that gives the callers

Mark, he's already been told who it is...a USMC veteran IMPOSTER but one who is an amateur extra morseman...ergo, that's okay.

Heil just doesn't get it when his own sentence is quoted back to him in response. :-)

Miccolis has to get into the act claiming he was "never on any 'AOLI' [sic] discussion boards." As a matter of fact he WAS and we even exchanged some posts there when AOL (I did not write 'AOLI') had many discussion boards, one of which was about amateur radio.

Since AOL took down all those boards, Miccolis can claim there were never any such things and he never posted on them.
Cute! I can't prove a thing NOW. Even if I had saved some of those postings (sounding for all the world like parroting of the ARRL's pet phrases), he can still DENY it! :-)

AOL also took down the software browser capability to directly exchange messages with Usenet at the same time.
No doubt some of them must have looked like this newsgripe does now. :-)

It's something like what the robeswine has done for YEARS in here, insulting anyone who disagrees with him (even in the slightest way), charging that they are homosexual, pedophiles, aren't patriotic, wanting to talk to wives, even to insulting educational institutions. The robeswine goes so far as to pull off a "1984" Orwellian RE-DEFINITION of truth and lies wherein he always tells the "truth" but those disagreeing with him always "lie." Perverse.

That seems to be okay by Paul Schleck. We can't use the claim that "he did it first." He did but we can't claim it under some rough draft of moderated newsgroup "regulations" to-be. Where has Paul been hiding, I wonder? He never saw those posts that went on for years?

"Bullying"? Ah, you have me mistaken for a regular of alt.fan.art-bell. As a kookologist, I'm a "fuckhead". After all, I metaphorically poke needles and pointy stix into people until they scream. It was quite effective on Wabbit.

Heil MUST interject and snarl some sarcasm into any no-code-test advocates' posting to another. He can't understand any radio system that isn't done via the amateur radio way, "his" way.

As a matter of fact, last year on a return auto trip from the midwest, my wife used our cell phone all along the highways from Iowa into Nevada, talking to her sister in Washington state, inquiring of and making reservations at new motels along the way, catching up on e-mail by getting them through the cell phone as audio...all from inside the car. No problems, no drop-outs.

Any cellular telephone in the USA has the capability of direct-dialing any other telephone, including foreign countries which have direct dialing to their subscribers' numbers. That's a plain and simple fact. Amateur radio can't do that anywhere in the world 24/7; cell phones can. That's another plain and simple fact. Each cell phone is a two-way radio, an "HT," but full-duplex instead of the ham half-duplex HT.

But, Heil MUST sound off like he is "superior" in radio so he does postings, many postings, editing quotes to fit his attack agenda du jour. That's okay, though, he is an amateur extra morseman and they seem to be exempt in behavior; us no-code-test advocates are NOT exempt, must play the role of boys from some absurd version of "Oliver Twist." [Heil tries to be a little dickens...]

you must be carefull about mentioning boys after all that will surely get YOU tarred as a pedophile (you beiing the one of the few I have not observed Robeson target with that brush or have I just missed it)

but heil is making a faint effort to control the agenda doesn't see that if the Procder refuse to conservse we can do that Ourselves but then none of them seem to be very good at thinking outside the box

well in 2 hours we have Kol Nedre (yom Kippur evening services) and the judgements made by God on Rosh hashana will be sealed for the year) hopefully this mean the FCC will issue the R&O on monday so those going to die of heart faulure over can get on with it

Like most other members of the GOP Senatorial Old Boys Club they allegedly all share a strange attraction to young males. For some reason these silver haired old perverts in DC believe the notion that "the youthful male essence" carries something 1000 times more powerful than Viagra, so they like to have their weekly cornhole'ing and suckoff sessions with 14-16 year old Page Boys to keep their shriveled old cocks functioning long past the time they should have given it all up. (Google the "The Franklin Coverup" and read about it)

Just think of it as just another 'fringe benefit' of holding high office.

Do you mean "Robeson"?

Why do you say "imposter"?

You claim to know who served and who didn't. Isn't he in the database?

Perhaps you'd have the same problem, Len....

I was not on any AOL "discussion boards". Not one.

Nope.

You're mistaken, Len. If you meant me, that is. Maybe you meant somebody else.

It's hard to tell who you mean, because you use names that do not match those who actually post here.

I think, Len, that you have a whole bunch of invisible, imaginary "friends". The person you refer to as "the robeswine" is just one of them.

There was a time when there were several people with my first name posting to rrap. You may have me confused with one of them.

> Since AOL took down all those boards,

I don't claim they didn't exist.

I just never had anything to do with them.

> Cute! I can't prove a thing NOW.

You keep making claims that you can't back up, Len.

> Even if I had saved some of

It's not a question of denying anything.

I was never involved with AOL discussion boards. That's all there is to it.

> AOL also took down the software browser capability to > directly exchange messages with Usenet at the same time.

Perhaps you have the two confused. I've been on Usenet since 1997. Posting to Usenet via AOL's browser was very convenient. But AOL eliminated that capability a few years ago - 2004 IIRC. At the time, AOL said their reason was lack of use.

I was never involved in AOL "discussion boards". Not one.

You are either mistaken - or deliberately telling an untruth.

Either way, I'm convinced.

"Consider that language a moment. 'Purposefully and materially supported hostilities against the United States' is in the eye of the beholder, and this administration has proven itself to be astonishingly impatient with criticism of any kind. The broad powers given to Bush by this legislation allow him to capture, indefinitely detain, and refuse a hearing to any American citizen who speaks out against Iraq or any other part of the so-called 'War on Terror.'

"If you write a letter to the editor attacking Bush, you could be deemed as purposefully and materially supporting hostilities against the United States. So is speech. So is writing. Communication between beings is raw data. It only conveys meaning to those who understand it.

But you're being inconsistent. You only want to eliminate code testing because YOU can't see any merit in code. Many people can't see any merit in knowing the laws or in having any technical knowledge, so why not eliminate testing altogether?

Because you want your views to determine what's done. No other cogent reason.

>Others who want to end code testing generally feel the same way. This >is well established.

Yes, it is. They want everything done the way they want it - just like you.

You want to get on the air code-free, use the no code bands - CB. You want to get on frequencies that allow code? Pass a code test. It's not rocket science.

To you. Why should that matter to the FCC? As I said, you're not qualified to discuss something you have absolutely no understanding of - let alone make decisions about it for others.

>Keep on using it then. But don't tell me that I must know it in order >to use my voice on the radio.

You can use your voice on voice bands - called CB. That's what CB is for - communications for those who don't want to pass a ham test (which includes CW). Like you.

It's funny, and most telling. The no-code hams have everything over 30
MHz, but it's the code hams that are the one's moving ham radio forward and doing anything technical wise. I guess the no-coders are still trying to figure things out.

Inconsistent.

It's not a barrier to USING radio - it's a barrier to one particular hobby, which incorporates CW as part of itself. You want to ride a bike as a hobby but not use wheels?

Code - ham.
No code - CB.

If that's too complicated for you to grasp, maybe you should take up grass-watching as a hobby.

So if she screamed at you, in Ukrainian, with her face all screwed up,
"You were so good!", you'd get the proper information, that she was about to take you to the wood shed for the terrible thing you'd done.
Right?

I can convey as much emotion in CW as your grandmother could in Ukrainian. You don't understand CW, so you can't understand how that could be true - which is why you're not qualified to discuss the matter.

My job is like describing the difference between red-orange and orange-red to someone who's been blind from birth. "Red-orange is redder than orange-red." "But ..." No buts - it is. Someone who's never seen just can't understand.

Raw data is all that's available for communication.

There's much more to human interaction than lexical communications, yes - but we're talking about lexical communications here, so anything else is totally irrelevant. You can't have any more than lexical communication by radio.

But tell bees that their dancing is just raw data. Then translate a bee dance for me, blind man.

Maybe the point was that a lot of us who can read CW should wear their "Boys?" I was one once...a long time ago. :-)

The USMC Imposter DID target me for a while, a long while back when you were off this newsgripe. If he added homosexuality to the long, long list of insults, it might have been overlooked; there were so many insults from him.

As Cecil Moore used to say, "I must be a lesbian since I have this attraction to women." :-)

That attraction, or rather "interest" has been in me since my teens began. Doesn't mean I want to BE one.

>but heil is making a faint effort to control the agenda doesn't see

I don't see Heil making ANY effort to control himself in here. His agenda is tightly focussed on snarling at everything I write. :-) He snarls and sneers so much that I just think of him as having the sense of humor of plankton.

>well in 2 hours we have Kol Nedre (yom Kippur evening services) and the Well, anything that appears in the big Reading Room at the FCC on Monday will have already been decided. The GPO will be or already has set up the Federal Register pages on Friday...if the R&O is ever published there.

The FCC doesn't regard amateur radio as a big matter and (in the last few years) hasn't always put amateur rules decisions IN the FR. Indeed, they don't bother much with keeping the Amateur sub-page of the Wireless Bureau up to date...certainly not on all the Petitions that were in Comment the year before.

Heh heh, maybe the FCC is running the R&O over to the ARRL for "approval" first? :-)

There is this pithy little thing I found in the ARRL Handbook:

The Amateur's Code

The Radio Amateur is

CONSIDERATE...never knowingly operates in such a way as to lessen the pleasure of others.

LOYAL.....offers loyalty, encouragement and support to other amateurs, local clubs, and the American Radio Relay League, through which Amateur Radio in the United States is represented nationally and internationally.

PROGRESSIVE...with knowledge abreast of science, a well-built and efficient station and operation above reproach.

FRIENDLY......slow and patient operating when requested; friendly advice and counsel to the beginner; kindly assistance, cooperation and consideration for the interests of others.
These are the hallmarks of the amateur spirit.

BALANCED......radio is an avocation, never interfering with duties owed to family, job, school or community.

PATRIOTIC.....station and skill always ready for service to country and community.

--The original Amateur's Code was written by Paul M. Segal, W9EEA, in 1928.

Kind of old, and flavored a lot like the US was during the time, but never-the-less, it has some important lessons in behavior and compassion that seem to be lacking in your vision for the hobby.

-Chuck Harris

hams revolutionizing amateur radio with their technical expertise.

This was NOT weather. This was seismic. The runway was rising in spurts sometimes as much as 3 feet in an hour. And, in that era all the comms were microwave and had been knocked out by the big quake. 80m was all he had.

At that time Alaska was tied into the networks by microwave. When the quake shifted towers, we lost it all.

Yes, I know. I was working at Kimberly Aeradio in BC at the time of the quake. It was violent enough to leave a small mark on my barograph, even at that distance. The guys in Edmonton lost all circuits to Alaska and in short order we knew that we had a HUGE communications emergency on our hands (not to mention a real disaster).

At least I was in a position to put the information on the proper teletype circuits addressed to the proper authorities.

I don't remember now. Those were interesting days. And that kind of emergency, while it can still happen, would be mitigated today by the fact of satellite telephones, GPS and so forth that don't depend on local power or microwave comms. Indeed, cell phones would probably have held up in most areas if the towers were halfway decently designed and powered....

It was all the microwave dishes on towers that moved a tad that made it a real communications emergency. If I were to have to deal with one like that today, I'd probably vote for using some digital mode, such as PSK31 or Olivia to move the traffic. But all we had back then was 850 shift RTTY and not very much of that. It was another two years before I got mine going (170 shift by then already!).

Contrary to Blow Code's fantasies, "the reports of my demise have been exaggerated." [more or less a quote of Samuel Clemens]

I've never had a heart attack, have never died. Now quit imaginging things that haven't happened. If you keep on, the new moderating

No, there are thousands and thousands of us who want to eliminate the US amateur radio code test for any license. It isn't confined to Jim-"Opus".

Go read ALL the comments to last year's NPRM from the FCC. I did. Can you?

If you look real close you will see that the FCC doesn't think that the code test is necessary for their needs in determining which amateur applicant should get a license. It didn't in 1990, it didn't in 1998, it didn't in 2004.

The rewrite of Radio Regulation S25 at WRC-03 eliminated
the international need for all administrations to test for radiotelegraphy for privileges below 30 MHz. It is optional to include or exclude by all administrations.
The International Amateur Radio Union wanted that rewrite.
The ARRL did NOT. The IARU won.

> Many people can't >see any merit in knowing the laws or in having any technical >knowledge, so why not eliminate testing altogether?

Illogical, incosistent reasoning. The discussion is about the radiotelegraphy test, a stand-alone test solely for manual radiotelegraphy. It is NOT about the written test elements so why mention them? [rhetorical question]

You MUST mention the writtens as somehow "related" but it never was. It's a common ploy by pro-coders but still irrelevant.

>Because you want your views to determine what's done. No other cogent >reason.

Tsk, tsk, tsk. Insulting insinuation there. Bad form.

>>Others who want to end code testing generally feel the same way. This >>is well established.

>Yes, it is. They want everything done the way they want it - just >like you.

Tsk, tsk, tsk, more insulting insinuation of alleged "bad conduct." :-)

>You want to get on the air code-free, use the no code bands - CB.

There is only one "CB band." It requires NO TEST at all. Never has. :-)

>You want to get on frequencies that allow code?

I've been on many, many "frequencies" that didn't require radiotelegraphy, either in use or to obtain a license to operate. Got one of those licenses in 1956.

>Pass a code test. It's not rocket science.

It's unnecessary and certainly NOT a "science." :-)

The only agency in the USA that grants amateur radio licenses is the FCC and they don't think the code test proves anything to them insofar as granting any amateur radio license.

>Why should that matter to the FCC?

Ahem, the FCC is the ONLY agency that grants amateur radio licenses in the USA.

>As I said, you're not >qualified to discuss something you have absolutely no understanding of >- let alone make decisions about it for others.

Klein, you are now violating the general to-be rules of moderation.

Jim-"Opus" is a Canadian. He is licensed under the jurisdiction of Industry Canada, NOT the FCC. That is his ONLY "qualification for exemption" in any discussions about what the FCC does or may do.

YOU, on the other hand, NOT being IN the FCC, cannot legally "make decisions about (the code test) it for others." That decision is up the FCC.

What YOU seem to want to do is force everyone current and future to take that code test...because you had to take a code test...and you want to "get even." :-)

>You can use your voice on voice bands - called CB.

Incorrect. There is the Maritime Radio Service. There is the Aeronautical Radio Service. There is the Private Land Mobile Radio Service. There is the little Citizens Band Radio Service. All have bands below 30 MHz and all allow voice. [I've been on all of them] It isn't restricted to just CB.

>That's what CB is >for - communications for those who don't want to pass a ham test >(which includes CW). Like you.

Now, now, lets not get testy there old timer. Citizens Band Radio Service was established in the USA in 1958, 46 years ago...as a general-purpose, short-range communications band that would suit the general citizenry. It required NO test whatsoever back then, still doesn't require any test. CB has changed, enlarged in the following 46 years and the number of users outnumber all licensed USA radio amateurs by at least 4:1. [with no licensing for decades, only gross numbers of unsers are possible through sales records such as EIA reports]

I believe that Canada has their own CB. Many countries do. That is irrelevant to the retention or elimination to the radiotelegraphy test for USA radio amateurs.

Now be nice and behave in here or the moderator team to be might make you sit in the corner.

Nonsense. ALL cats (especially domesticated ones) have POOR vision. They are scent-oriented.

If you've had cats at all you would realize this.

Other geologic events are passed via WX circuits besides earthquakes.
For example, ash plumes as detected by wx satellie observations.
NOTAMS are in the WX circuits.

When will CB have the same power and range as ham radio? When it does,
I'll go back.

CB is dead, quit using the term "CB" like an insult. It is short range and therefore not a comparison.

Try to keep up. I have been quite consistent. You have not being paying attention. I made no argument against voice at all. I made the argument that a live voice conveys more than just words. Again, try to keep up.

Never had a cat, did you? I grew up with them. They don't depend on smell near as much as dogs but they depend on it just the same.

Are we on the radio right now? Your apples and oranges arguments are getting tiresome. Here in Usenet, the text is preserved. CW is not.
Text on usenet is easily saved for future consideration. Is CW saved on a radio server for others to listen to and reply to at their leisure?

Don't be so obtuse. I NEVER said that I would get the proper words in monotone English then I would not likely grasp the degree of

Not a good analogy. I can still hear the CW. I just don't know the meaning. Your analogy is more like trying to describe CW to a deaf person.

With CW, yes. Raw data plus inflection conveys a fuller conversation.

Oh bull! You get less than you can in person, true, but much more with an angry or happy voice than with code.

>But tell bees that their dancing is just raw data. Then translate a

This is relevant how?

Vocal communication is never just a conveyance of information but you insist that's all that ham radio is.

In the United States, suffrage is determined by the individual states, not federally. There is no national "right to vote". The states and the people have changed the U.S. Constitution five times to disallow states from limiting suffrage, thereby expanding it.

I wouldn't worry about that too much. just be careful of some of the advice dispensed around here though....

well, Dyslexia often affects the interconnection of the visual processing centers with that of visual pattern recognition. I know, I have that problem myself.

Since this problem appears to be one in the visual side of the system, it stands to reason that sound would not be affected in the same way (nor would touch - in my case, braille is far easier for me to read than the printed word was). CW is much the same way for me. I picked it up as a teen, but never did get around to using it, nor did I bother with it when I went in to take my first Amateur radio exame.

you may note how well I type. Actually, its an automatic spell checker correcting some of the "dyslexic typing" my fingers turn out. There are some word variations that still get past the spellcheck though. :(

point is, since CW is a sound language, it might be loads easier for her to learn than say the printed word.

perhaps you should change that to "Nice little story about a couple of CBer's who took matters just a bit too far".

1. they were not hams in any way, shape or form (you can check for their names on qrz or the fcc database to verify that)
2. they got in an argument on CB radio
3. they shot each other in a public place (A duel).

end of report.

where in that story was ham radio (or the no-code debate) ever mentioned?

Who is "Robeson?"

Who is "Jim?"

>> Why do you say "imposter"?
>
>well what else do you call someone that fakes their background

Maybe this "Jim" (whoever that is) meant "imp poster?" :-)

The Imposter has NEVER made available a single document for anyone to view, hasn't even shown a snapshot of himself from that claimed "18-year USMC career." In EIGHTEEN years he has NO evidence? Bullshit. He is a FAKE...or the circumstances of his not making a "full 20" are so damn embarrassing to him that he can't post them in public.

>> You claim to know who served and who didn't. Isn't he in the database?
>he is no data base that I can find

This "Jim" (whoever that is) laid a small word trap there.
He carefully did NOT specify WHICH database. The Imposter IS in the FCC database, thus will appear in the QRZ database. This "Jim" (whoever that is) will then begin a big argument over databases, possibly spinning off a whole new thread...ignoring the original military Imposter subject.

This "Jim" has NEVER served in any military branch. He may think the "database" (of those in the military) is some freely accessible database somewhere on the Internet.
It is NOT. For those actively serving NOW it is available via the DSN (through the Internet) but ONLY to those with clearance to access that information.

For military veteran information, one goes to NARA (National Archives and Records Administration) St. Louis Missouri, NMPRC (National Military Personnel Records Center) there. One MUST supply the veteran's personal identity (besides the name) such as a Social Security Number and/or military branch serial number if that was used during the term of service. But that can gain access ONLY if the requestor is identifiable family/kin or a previously-identified Human Resources department or investigative organization (police departments, FBI, etc.). The VA (Veterans Administration) has to go that route also. There is NO WAY that any government agency is going to realease information on anyone 'casually' from a simple phone call to the VA. This FAKE takes advantage of that in his bluffing in here ("call the VA" repeated often).

Let's take another example of the FAKE's bluffing. The CAP (Civil Air Patrol) flies CIVILIAN-registry aircraft. In ALL air traffic communications around the world (that includes airport towers) ALL inbound and outbound aircraft communicate in English to air traffic controllers and identify themselves by the aircraft registry number. In the USA that is an "N" prefix followed by numerals with a one- or two-letter suffix. In the USA it is common to use the last two numerals and suffix in IDs with local towers. The "CAP radio callsign" is NOT used for that. The FAKE has glossed over any mention of the aircraft that he supposedly flies (as "pilot in command") or its ATC ID. Civil Aviation radio band is used (118 to 137 MHz, always voice). Use that two-number plus suffix a few times in tower-controlled takeoffs and landings and it is hard to forget. [I still remember "two-one-whiskey" (21W) for the Cessna 150 I used in some flight lessons 43 years ago at VNY] Ergo, this supposed "major" isn't involved in actual flying per se, just using some common phrases tossed out AS IF he were a real pilot. He may not have any "major" rank at all. His QRZ bio shows a picture of him in a flight suit with captain's bars, clothing that can be bought surplus at an "Army-Navy Store" by anyone with money to buy it. Insignia and medals, ribbons are available for sale at many more venues.

In a series of postings in here, Frank Gilliland asked some pointed, detailed USMC questions of our fake. Fake could NOT answer them correctly. In a shorter series of messages with Hans Brakob, the fake screwed up his responses on military cryptographic equipment and procedures, including familiar names of equipment and methods. Hans was a Master Chief PO in charge of crypto during his active duty time. In an earlier tell-tale sign of bluffing fakery, the Fake could not name a single item of military radio equipment used over his supposed 18-year career term, radios that would be common to non-radio-specialist military personnel use. Already a licensed radio amateur and he could NOT remember either the nomenclature or familiar name of a piece of radio equipment?!? Inconceivable! The Fake countered with the usual fake's rationalization: it was 'classified' and he 'couldn't reveal it!" Bullshit. The nomenclatures of military radio equipment is KNOWN and the familiar names are familiar, not some 'secret.' Nomenclatures, even for cryptographic equipment, are in public display for RFBs of contracts by civilian firms at the Government Accounting Office and all government agencies offering contracts. The Fake doesn't know a "Plugger" from a "Prick-twenty-five" yet both were operational during his supposed 18-year active duty time.

So, this "Jim" (whoever that is) wants a "database" with this amateur extra morseman's name on it? Now he knows were to look: St. Louis, MO. [www.nara.gov] Good luck to his little "subsidizing soul" as a taxpayer, taxes withheld from his paycheck by an unknown employer. On the non-database information this "Jim" doesn't know squat and should keep his nose out of conversations of REAL veterans about REAL radio. Ptui.

Shalom,

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

Billy "I can't read" Smith fucks up again when he claims in <gsJRg.2244$o71.124@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"By the way, weren't you required to retest per a letter from FCC enforcement bureau? Shall we post the record for all to see again? They don't make people retest unless you have been accused or proven to have committed rules violations."

Billy can't read the ARRL website which states:
NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered
by a volunteer examiner.

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in <VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the "Rhodes" scholar fucks up again and even demonstrates he is an imbecile in <8uqwg.8275$vO.7632@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Right you are, wannabe Rhode's Scholar!"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right."
in<hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:

"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded
status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>
"Sure I can spell and smell."

"Billy" the NOtwordSmith fucks up again with this incompete sentence in <qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your
so called educatiion actually doing for you? Those online classes."

<B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

"Rhodes scholar" Billy Lardass Davies Smith blunders and blows his cover again in <Et%0g.6340$sq5.1769@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Rhode's scholar Scheissman blows his cover again."

Billy "dumbass" Smith steps on his own tiny dick when he tries to criticize others' typos,but he doesn't "perform" well as usual with his blatant "stupidity" in <oCk1g.5958$Es3.3907@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Noteed!!!!!!!!!!!!! Bwhahahahahahah. You're a brilliant one Scheissman.
You even peform stupid acts on your blatant stupidty"

Billy "dropout Lardass" Smith steps on his own dick when he tries to comment on others' spelling abilities, but he "can't" do any better in Message-ID: <mQr3g.8970$sq5.4914@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>: "Woger cant spell very well anyway."

Billy "dropout pizza BOY" Smith fucks up his sentence again when he blathered in <WdZfg.629$lp.259@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "How about those retest letter you received for jamming."

Billy "illiterate " Smith claims to have been in the Library, but he can't even spell "I've" correctly, maybe Billy should check out the English tutoring books there in WpFgg.1310$lf4.1288@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Ive been to quite a few libraries on Sunday and a lot of them are open."

Billy Smith "the" ill-educated moron fucks up again in <4zxLg.15720$Qf.5115@newsread2.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Roger is about to finally have th final episode where..."

Billy Smith stumbles on his club foot in his fat mouth when he tries to claim "hillbillies" are somehow inferior(he squeaks from "experience"?) in <7CdRg.11366$v%4.8492@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Is that another fine quality of the Hillbilly state? You know, that third world one where you live full of miscegenation, inbreeding, and the like. Speaking from experrience again?"

Billy the spelling bee champ Smith fucks up again while trying to make fun of others' typos and pegs the irony meter in <my5Sg.1536$Y24.130@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Would that by "that" Woger? How abou that Todd rather than "Taod"?"

Leave it to the fucktard who tried to pass off an ALABAMA ARES website for one in WEST VIRGINIA to lie again. Keeping up with your tradition of posting least reliable information from Houston's least reliable ISP, retard?

And what color and make is Roger's car?

Saggytits Lee (Stagger Lee@houston-hunks.com) fails to back up his "webcam story" when he changes the subject with lame excuses when asked what type of car Roger drives and it's color in <night.vision.woger@houston-hunks.com>:
"Those newer webcams include automatic switchover to night vision mode when it gets dark, but the pictures are in that typical blue-green monochrome mode, and it's tough to make out fine details."

Saggytits Lee steps on his own tiny dick when he tried to correct
somebody else's English use first by saying one "operates" a dictionary

instead of reading it, then uses "things" instead of "thinks" in <jewish.reggae.roger@houston-hunks.com>:

Poor Billy, he works his restaurant high school kid's job lives in low income public housing and is projecting his loser life onto others. Billy has no education as you can see:

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

Billy "I can't read" Smith fucks up again when he claims in <gsJRg.2244$o71.124@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"By the way, weren't you required to retest per a letter from FCC enforcement bureau? Shall we post the record for all to see again? They

Billy can't read the ARRL website which states:
NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered by a volunteer examiner.

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in <VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the "Rhodes" scholar fucks up again and even demonstrates he is an imbecile in <8uqwg.8275$vO.7632@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Right you are, wannabe Rhode's Scholar!"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right."
in<hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>

"Sure I can spell and smell."

<qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to
slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your

<B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this
slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

"Rhodes scholar" Billy Lardass Davies Smith blunders and blows his cover again in <Et%0g.6340$sq5.1769@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Rhode's scholar Scheissman blows his cover again."

Billy "dumbass" Smith steps on his own tiny dick when he tries to criticize others' typos,but he doesn't "perform" well as usual with his blatant "stupidity" in <oCk1g.5958$Es3.3907@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Noteed!!!!!!!!!!!!! Bwhahahahahahah. You're a brilliant one Scheissman.
You even peform stupid acts on your blatant stupidty"

Billy "dropout Lardass" Smith steps on his own dick when he tries to comment on others' spelling abilities, but he "can't" do any better in Message-ID: <mQr3g.8970$sq5.4914@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Woger cant spell very well anyway."

Billy "dropout pizza BOY" Smith fucks up his sentence again when he blathered in <WdZfg.629$lp.259@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"How about those retest letter you received for jamming."

Billy "illiterate " Smith claims to have been in the Library, but he can't even spell "I've" correctly, maybe Billy should check out the English tutoring books there in WpFgg.1310$lf4.1288@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Ive been to quite a few libraries on Sunday and a lot of them are open."

Billy Smith "the" ill-educated moron fucks up again in <4zxLg.15720$Qf.5115@newsread2.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Roger is about to finally have th final episode where..."

Billy Smith stumbles on his club foot in his fat mouth when he tries to claim "hillbillies" are somehow inferior(he squeaks from "experience"?) in <7CdRg.11366$v%4.8492@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Is that another fine quality of the Hillbilly state? You know, that third world one where you live full of miscegenation, inbreeding, and the like. Speaking from experrience again?"

Billy the spelling bee champ Smith fucks up again while trying to make fun of others' typos and pegs the irony meter in <my5Sg.1536$Y24.130@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Would that by "that" Woger? How abou that Todd rather than "Taod"?"

I'm glad that you called the jail for us and found out that you weren't there.

Do you know WHERE you were until this morning, or is that hidden from your current personality?

> More to the point, are there more licensed amateurs since the code requirement > was removed years ago?

Yes. In the USA at least.

Since the inception of the no-code Technician class here in 1991, the growth of the Technician class license numbers in the USA has been continuous. Those now comprise about 49 % of ALL licensees. The Technician class license numbers are twice that of General class, the next-largest license class.

Since the "reconstruction" in FCC amateur radio regulations of 2001, the number of licensees grew to peak in July, 2003. At that time the maximum code test rate was fixed at 5 WPM, all classes.

A problem now is the attrition of the older licensees. More old-timers are leaving/expiring (their licenses) than are being replaced by new (never before licensed in amateur radio) licensees. Source: www.hamdata.com. That trend has persisted for three years.

The code test is not THE factor causing it, just one of the major factors in slowing the increase of new licensees.
Coupled with the stubborn resistance to change of ANY regulations by olde-tymers, there is little incentive to enter olde-tyme amateur radio. Ally that with the huge growth of the Internet in the 15 years it has been public - an Internet that has spread worldwide with near-instant communications over that world - and the traditional standards and practices of olde-tyme ham radio just don't have the appeal to newcomers they once had.

Elimination of the code test for any license will cause a spurt in new licensees. While such elimination is not a guarantee to far-future growth, it will be the significant act to being CHANGING regulations to better fit the modern times. Keeping up with changing times is a NECESSITY in regulations, regardless of the personal desires of the minority of amateurs making up the olde-tyme group.

He didn't say....but at three feet per hour with the ocean nearby it wouldn't be that hard to tell. And that was the point of his notice. He COULDN'T determine it. But he knew the published value was wrong, which also meant that all he could give arriving aircraft was a guess.

You're arguing for the visual now? Voice conveys more than CW, which is your argument against CW. Voice conveys more than Usenet, which ISN'T an argument against Usenet.

So which is it? Is the fact that voice conveys more than X an argument against X or not?

I'm getting tired of your "I have to argue just so that I can win"

I've told you repeatedly, UnWiseman, that I post as no one but myself.
I never have; I never will. You seem a little confused on the topic since you made mention of a Houston ISP. I don't have a Houston ISP and I don't live in Houston. I live right here in the same country as little demented you.

That aside, you are the poster of filth. Your stream of consciousness ramblings about people having sex with their parents, their children, with animals, with those of the same gender take us on a disgusting visit to Roger World. You're a piece of detritus, a chunk of human garbage.

I've been able to read for over fifty-one years. I've read that you have received a couple of missives from your old pal Mr. Hollingsworth and that you were ordered to retest. This all comes in the short period in which you've held an amateur radio license. I also know that one additional strike would likely do you in.

I've read your comments about the owner of Ohio Valley Internet Service and I saw how quickly you were cut loose. That has happened to a number of your service providers. It is the reason that you need to hide behind the various sock puppets.

Read my posts, Roger. I neither flood newsgroups nor post filth. If you want to call that being a super ham, fine. I will point out that this isn't amateur radio. This is usenet.

I'm not, Roger. I'd like to see this newsgroup so clean that decent people can read it without wading through your disturbed thoughts.
You're a sociopath and you don't know how civilized human beings act.
You need to be in a rubber room with no radio equipment and no internet

How do you come by your repugnant thoughts, Roger? During your childhood, did someone ever help you along the way? Did someone impart technical knowledge or spark the flame for a lifelong interest in something? Did you repay them by dreaming that you could begin a homosexual encounter with that person? By fantasizing a sexual liaison with his dog?

You seem to have lots of thoughts about men having sex with their mothers, children, farm animals and other men. Where do those thoughts come from? What caused you to become a defective person?

You need mental health professionals before you do harm to yourself or others, Roger.

That must have been on a different evening, Roger. My wife never worked as a street walker and she is quite trim. Your accounts of the evening we visited have varied wildly from "never happened" to "it was 2 on 1" to "I wasn't at home; my girlfriend was there".

That's not her? Well, DUH! Tell him, Rog: You don't have a girlfriend. There isn't a woman with an IQ higher than 70 anywhere in this valley that'd be caught within ten feet of you, unless it was in the checkout line at WalMart.

Arf Arf, Roger could get that girl as a "girlfreind". Unfortunately for him, she'd not be much use in holding the door closed. Rog could talk to her in his "Not Lloyd" voice and then have her respond in his "billy shitty drawers" voice.

I found an online military database in very short order. It shows information on the individual you are calling an imposter. The information is available for free, online. I am not going to provide

358. Monthly Post of 30 helpful tips for no-code hams.

The 30 Steps below will help all No-Code Hams, it will also help you to find others just like yourself. These 30 steps should also be added to the present writtens.

Step One: Use as many "Q" signals as possible. Yes, I know they were invented solely for CW and are totally inappropriate for two meter FM, but they are fun and entertaining. They keep people guessing as to what you really meant. I.E. "I'm going to QSY to the phone." Can you really change frequencies to the phone? QSL used to mean, "I am acknowledging receipt", but now it appears to mean, "yes" or "OK". I guess I missed it when the ARRL changed the meaning. It is also best to use "OK" and "QSL" together. Redundancy is the better part of Lid-dom.

Step Two: Never laugh when you can say "HI HI". No one will ever know you aren't a long time CW rag-chewer if you don't tell them. They'll think you've been on since the days of Marconi.

Step Three: Utilize an alternative vocabulary. Use words like "destinated" and "negatory". It's OK to make up your own words here. I.E. "Yeah Tom, I "pheelbart zaphonix" occasionally myself."

Step Four: Always say "XX4XXX" (Insert your own call) "for I.D." As mentioned in Step One, anything that creates redundancy is always encouraged. That's why we have the Department of Redundancy Department. (Please note that you can follow your call with "for identification purposes" instead of "for I.D." While taking longer to say, it is worth more "LID points".

Step Five: The better the copy on two meter FM, the more you should use phonetics. Names should be especially used if they are short or common ones. I.E. "My name is Al... Alpha Lima" or "Jack.. Juliet Alpha Charlie Kilo." If at all possible use the less common HF phonetics "A4SM... America, Number Four, Sugar Mexico." And for maximum "LID points", make up unintelligible phonetics. "My name is Bob... Billibong Oregano Bumperpool."

Step Six: Always give the calls of yourself and everyone who is (or has been) in the group, whether they are still there or not. While this has been unnecessary for years, it is still a great memory test. You may also use "and the group" if you are an "old timer" or just have a bad memory. Extra points for saying everyone's call and then clearing in a silly way "K2PKK, Chow, Chow."

Step Seven: Whenever possible, use the wrong terminology. It keeps people guessing. Use "modulation" when you mean "deviation", and vice-versa.

Step Eight: If someone asks for a break, always finish your turn, taking as long as possible before turning it over. Whenever possible, pass it around a few times first. This will discourage the breaker, and if it is an emergency, encourage him to switch to another repeater and not bother you.

Step Nine: Always ask involved questions of the person who is trying to sign out. Never let him get by with just a "yes" or "no" answer. Make it a question that will take him a long time to answer.

Step Ten: The less you know on a subject, the more you should speculate about it in the roundtable. Also the amount of time you spend on the subject should be inversely proportionate to your knowledge of the subject even though you have no damn clue.

Step Eleven: Always make sure you try to communicate with only a handheld and a rubber duck antenna. Also, make sure you work through a repeater that you can hear very well, but it cannot hear you. This will put out a kind of "LID mating call": "Well, Joe, I can hear the repeater just fine here. I wonder why it can't hear me?" You will score maximum LID points if you are mobile, and with the radio lying in the passenger seat.

Step Twelve: If you hear two amateurs start a conversation, wait until they are twenty seconds into their contact, and then break in to make a call, or better yet to use the auto-patch. Make sure you keep the repeater tied up for at least three minutes. This way, once the two have re-established contact, they won't even remember what they were talking about.

Step Thirteen: You hear someone on the repeater giving directions to a visiting amateur. Even if the directions are good, make sure you break in with your own "alternate route but better way to get there" version. This is most effective with several other "would-be LIDs", each giving a different route. By the time the visiting amateur unscrambles all the street names whizzing by in his mind, he should have moved out of the range of the repeater. This keeps you from having to stick around to help the guy get back out of town, later.

Step Fourteen: If an annoying station is bothering you, make sure your other "LID" buddies have a "coded" frequency list. Even though "CODES" are strictly forbidden on Amateur Radio, it's really neat to practice "James Bond" tactics.

Step Fifteen: Always use the National Calling Frequency for general conversations. The more uninteresting, the longer you should use it. Extra points are awarded if you have recently move from an adjacent frequency for no reason. Make sure when DX is "rolling" in on 52.525 that you hang out there and talk to your friends five miles down the road about the good old CB days!

Step Sixteen: Make sure that if you have a personal problem with someone, you should voice your opinion in a public forum, especially a net. Make sure you give their name, call, and any other identifying remarks. For maximum points, make sure the person in question is not on the repeater, or not available.

Step Seventeen: Make sure you say the first few words of each transmission twice, especially if it is the same thing each time. Like "roger, roger" or "fine business, fine business". I cannot stress enough about encouraging redundancy.

Step Eighteen: If you hear a conversation on a local repeater, break in and ask how each station is receiving you. Of course they will only see the signal of the repeater you are using, but it's that magic moment when you can find a fellow "LID", and get the report. Extra points are awarded if you are using a base station, and the repeater is less than twenty-five air miles from you.

Step Nineteen: Use the repeater for an hour or two at a time, preventing others from using it. Better yet, do it on a daily basis. Your quest is to make people so sick of hearing your voice every time they turn on their radio, they'll move to another frequency. This way you'll lighten the load on the repeater, leaving even more time for you to talk on it.

Step Twenty: See just how much flutter you can generate by operating at handheld power levels too far away from the repeater. Engage people in conversations when you know they wont be able to copy half of what your saying. Even when they say your uncopyable, continue to string them along by making further transmissions. See just how frustrated you can make the other amateur before he finally signs off in disgust.

Step Twenty One: Use lots of radio jargon. After all, it makes you feel important using words ordinary people don't say. Who cares if it makes you sound like you just fell off Channel 19 on the citizen's Band? Use phrases such as "Roger on that", "10-4", "I'm on the side", "Your making the trip" and "Negatory on that".

Step Twenty Two: Use excessive microphone gain. See just how loud you can make your audio. Make sure the audio gain is so high that other amateurs can hear any bugs crawling on your floor. If mobile, make sure the wind noise is loud enough that others have to strain to pick your words out from all the racket.

Step Twenty Three: Start every transmission with the word "Roger" or "QSL". Sure, you don't need to acknowledge that you received the other transmission in full. After all, you would simply ask for a repeat if you missed something. But consider it your gift to the other amateur to give him solace every few seconds that his transmissions are being received.

Step Twenty Four: When looking for a contact on a repeater, always say your "listening" or "monitoring" multiple times. I've always found that at least a half dozen times or so is good. Repeating your multiple "listening" ID's every 10 to 15 seconds is even better. Those people who didn't want to talk to you will eventually call you, hoping you'll go away after you have finally made a contact.

Step Twenty Five: Always use a repeater, even if you can work the other station easily on simplex ... especially if you can make the contact on simplex. The coverage of the repeater you use should be inversely proportional to your distance from the other station.

Step Twenty Six: When on repeaters using courtesy tones, you should always say "over". Courtesy tones are designed to let everyone know when you have unkeyed but don't let that stop you. Say "over", "back to you" or "go ahead". It serves no useful purpose but don't worry, it's still fun!

Step Twenty Seven: Use the repeater's autopatch for frivolous routine calls... especially during morning or evening commute times. While pulling into the neighborhood, call home to let them know you'll be there in two minutes.... or, call your spouse to complain about the bad day you had at work. After all, the club has "measured rate" service on their phone line so they get charged for each autopatch call. Your endeavor is to make so many patches in a year that you cost the club at least $20 in phone bills. That way you'll feel you got your money's worth for your dues!

Step Twenty Eight: Never say "My name is ....." It makes you sound human. If at all possible, use one of the following phrases: a) "The personal here is ..." b) "The handle here is..."

Step Twenty Nine: Use "73" and "88" incorrectly. Both are already considered plural, but add a "s" to the end anyway. Say "73's" or "88's". Who cares if it means "best regards" and "love and kisses." Better yet, say "seventy thirds"! (By the way, seventy thirds equals about 23.3).

Step Thirty: If the repeater is off the air for service, complain about the fact that it was off the air as soon as it's turned back on. Act as though your entire day has been ruined because the repeater wasn't available when you wanted to use it. Even thought you have never paid a penny to help out with the upkeep of it.

Now if we can just get rid of the Beer Enema brigade, Woger, Stevie, Lloydie, Billy Smith, and Toad, these groups can get back to being radio groups again and we can talk about how to employ CW to save ham radio, because I know we all agree CW is what will save it.

Catch you on the bands unless you're a No-code ham, then I won't because I don't do CB.

It's called "little amplifier syndrome".

The number of US hams peaked a few years ago, and is now below what it was in 2000.

It was also continuous before the Technician lost its code test.

Actually, as of October 1, 2006, the number of Technicians was 285,709 out of 656,481 US hams. Those are the number of individuals holding current, unexpired, FCC-issued amateur licenses. Technicians account for 43.5% of US hams, not 49%.

> The Technician class license numbers are twice that > of General class, the next-largest license class.

131, 945 General Class licenses as of the same date as above.

It should be noted, however, that since April 15, 2000, the FCC has been renewing all Technician Plus licenses as Technicians. Thus, the Technician class is composed of some hams who have not passed a Morse Code test, and some who have.

The Technician Plus class numbers are steadily dropping, because that license is not issued anymore. If the FCC does not change the rules, there will be no more Technician Plus licenses at all in about 3-1/2 years, because they will all have either expired, upgraded, or been renewed as Technicians.

> Since the "reconstruction" in FCC amateur radio regulations of > 2001, the number of licensees grew to peak in July, 2003.

The current rules went into effect on April 15, 2000.

The peak of 2003 is well documented. Since then the number of US amateurs has declined to below what it was in 2000.

> At > that time the maximum code test rate was fixed at 5 WPM, all

That is true.

However, back in 1990, FCC created medical waivers for the 13 and 20 wpm Morse Code tests. These waivers meant that anyone who could pass 5 wpm could bypass the higher-speed Morse Code tests by obtaining a doctor's note.

It is true that there are more expirations than newcomers.

However, it cannot be stated with certainty whether the decline is due to the attrition of "older licensees", or the loss of newer hams who simply let their licenses expire.

For example, from the late 1970s to the early 1990s, a significant number of new amateurs appeared who used amateur radio for personal/family communications. They were very interested in VHF/UHF repeaters, autopatch, and related activities. Most got Technician licenses - with or without Morse Code - because that license gave access to 2 meter and 440 MHz repeaters.

But with the appearance of inexpensive and ubiquitous cell phones, that source of new amateurs all but disappeared.

> The code test is not THE factor causing it, just one of the > major factors in slowing the increase of new licensees.

Perhaps.

But consider this:

The growth in the number of US hams from February 1991 to April 2000 was less than the growth from December 1981 to February 1991. (Same amount of time, before and after the Tech lost its code test.) This is true in both absolute numbers and percentage.

Since the restructuring of April 2000, which reduced both code and written exams, the number of US hams has actually dropped by over 17,000.

> Coupled with the stubborn resistance to change of ANY > regulations by olde-tymers, there is little incentive to enter > olde-tyme amateur radio.

What changes do you suggest, Len, besides the elimination of the code test?

There may be little incentive for you to enter amateur radio, but for thousands of others, the incentive is there.

It should be noted that in the Readex survey of 1996, the most staunch pro-code-test age group was the youngest amateurs.

Amateur radio is not the internet, and the internet is not amateur radio. Amateur radio can only survive by offering a unique communications experience - that is, by doing things that cannot be done online.

It should be remembered that the growth of cell phones and low-cost long distance phone service is another factor affecting growth. We will not see many people getting amateur radio licenses for "honeydew" purposes - with or without a code test.

Perhaps - in the short term.

> While such elimination is not a > guarantee to far-future growth, it will be the significant act > to being CHANGING regulations to better fit the modern times.

It should be remembered that the dropping of the Morse Code test for Technician back in 1991 did not result in long-term growth in numbers.

The reduction of both Morse Code testing and written testing in 2000 did not result in long-term or even medium-term growth. The numbers grew from 2000 to 2003, then declined to a level below that of 2000.

> Keeping up with changing times is a NECESSITY in > regulations, regardless of the personal desires of the minority > of amateurs making up the olde-tyme group.

What changes besides eliminating the Morse Code test are necessary to 'keep up with modern times'?

It should be remembered that, in the comments to the recent FCC NPRM, the majority of those who commented did not want complete elimination of the Morse Code test for all US licenses. The majority wanted at least some Morse Code testing to remain.

Eliminating the Morse Code test will not greatly increase the visiblity of Amateur Radio. It will not reduce the cost of equipment. It will not make it any less difficult to set up an effective HF antenna, nor will it solve RFI or CC&R problems.

It is spelled "prostate," but you did get "hemorrhoids" right. If you had to spell things via CW, you wouldn't have spelled only 50% of the big words right. I admit that you could use the Q signal for "How is your prostate?" (QYP?), but most good ops spell things out instead.

QYH?

There have been at least three people with that first name who posted here regularly. They are easily told apart by their FCC-assigned amateur radio call letters:

Jim KH2D

Jim WA4STJ

Jim N2EY

"Imposter".

RRAP doesn't accept documents or snapshots, Len. Just text.

You say this person "has NEVER made available a single document for anyone to view, hasn't even shown a snapshot of himself"

Don't you really mean that he has never sent any of those things to you?
He could have sent them to other people, without you being aware of it.

The fact that you have never seen something does not mean it does not exist.

> In EIGHTEEN years
> he has NO evidence?

Don't you really mean that he has never sent evidence to you?
He could have lots of evidence - and simply kept it from you.

> Bullshit. He is a FAKE...or the > circumstances of his not making a "full 20" are so damn
> embarrassing to him that he can't post them in public.

That's certainly one possibility. But it's not the only one.

For example:

He may have left the military as part of one of those 'early out' programs that existed before September 2001. Or he may have left due to family hardship, health problems, planned reduction-in-force, etc.

Not everyone who leaves after 18 years is embarrassed by the circumstances.

But that's not the point, really. The fact that you have not seen the evidence you demand isn't proof someone is a fake or imposter.

So what your saying is that you really don't know who has served and who has not. You don't have access to that information in the official Government databases.

IOW, you're just guessing who served in the US military and who didn't.

Like "N2EY" - there's actually a registered aircraft with that tail

Maybe.

Or maybe he just didn't go into a lot of detail.

The point is, you don't know for sure.

Of course. That's a possibility.

Or they could be real - the flight suit, the insignia, the medals, etc.
They could all be real, couldn't they? You don't really know.....

By the same token, many documents can be faked using commonly-available digital software. For example, someone could produce a fake DD-214 if they had access to scan of a genuine one and the right software, hardware, and skill.

Such a fake might not fool someone who saw the actual document and knew what a real one was like. But for a scan, it could be very convincing.

And faking such a document is, I think, a serious Federal crime.
Passing it off as genuine is, I think, another Federal crime.

Well, that's one explanation.

Here's another: Perhaps he forgot. Perhaps he's leading you on.

Perhaps he made a mistake.

For example, I recall someone who says they were stationed in Japan in the early 1950s. This person understated the distance from the USSR to Japan by more than 20%. He also made reference to "Bear bombers" even though that particular Soviet aircraft did not enter service until after he had left Japan.

All sorts of people make mistakes, forget things, and remember things that never were. I think you sometimes confuse me with other people.

IOW, you couldn't access the information. Yet you claim to know who served and who didn't. You claim to know who is an imposter and who is for-real.

But, in fact, you're just guessing.

Len, do you think that only veterans can discuss radio?

You want to discuss amateur radio policy, even though you are not a radio amateur nor an FCC employee nor a professional policymaker. But when someone you say "never served" speaks up on what you consider a military matter, you want them silenced - even if they are right and you are mistaken.

I'm convinced.

This shows that you have not kept up. I did not say that we communicate visually more, I said that we are get the most information from our environment visually than by any other sense. Our other senses help us much less than they do for most other higher animals.

Each olfactory cell in a cat has about 40 cilia while a human cell has only about 6 to 8. A cat has approximately 60 to 80 million olfactory cells while a human has about 5 to 20 million. Dogs put us all to shame.

How many times do I have to tell you that I am not arguing against CW? It has it's place but I am arguing against CW as a requirement for full access to ARS. I ask what is so great about CW and all I seem to get is a rather patronizing "You wouldn't understand".

>So which is it? Is the fact that voice conveys more than X an

This again shows how you have not been keeping up. Not an attack, an observation.

>I'm getting tired of your "I have to argue just so that I can win"

Explain how I have to "grow up" and, while you are at it, explain how you are qualified to make such a statement. You have insulted me in such a manner several times yet I have said nothing of the sort to you. You patronize me while I give legitimate arguments. You don't like my arguments and try to deflect by misquoting.

Of all the pro-coders here, I had the most respect for your view. I didn't agree but at least you made a point without the typical insults of others here. Now you seem to be joining their ilk.

Sad.

Well, we agree that we should keep this requirement, but I don't agree that CW should seen as reflecting poorly on us hams. CW operation, albeit old fashion, remains a useful skill that I think should be encouraged. I do acknowledge that the new digital modes and computer based CW does make CW skills less necessary, but I don't think we should consider it old fashion or out of date.

These are the numbers of current, unexpired amateur radio licenses held by individuals on the stated dates, and the percentage of the total number of active licenses that class contains:

As of May 14, 2000:

Novice - 49,329 (7.3%)
Technician - 205,394 (30.4%)
Technician Plus - 128,860 (19.1%)
General - 112,677 (16.7%)
Advanced - 99,782 (14.8%)
Extra - 78,750 (11.7%)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 334,254 (49.5%)

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 291,209 (43.2%)

Total all classes - 674,792

As of October 1, 2006:

Novice - 24,304 (3.7%) [decrease of 25,025]
Technician - 285,709 (43.5%) [increase of 80,315]
Technician Plus - 35,378 (5.4%) [decrease of 93,482]
General - 131,945 (20.1%) [increase of 19,268]
Advanced - 70,756 (10.8%) [decrease of 29,026]
Extra - 108,389 (16.5%) [increase of 29,639]

(percentages may not add up to exactly 100.0% due to rounding)

Total Tech/TechPlus - 321,087 (48.9%) [decrease of 13,167]

Total General/Advanced/Extra - 311,090 (47.4%) [increase of 19,881]

Total all classes - 656,481 (decrease of 18,311)

Note that these totals do not include licenses that have expired but are in the grace period.

They also do not include club, military, RACES or other station-only licenses.

Note also that effective April 15, 2000, new Novice, Technician Plus and Advanced licenses are no longer issued.

Since April 15, 2000, FCC has renewed all existing Technician Plus licenses as Technician. It is therefore informative to consider the totals of the two classes, since the Technician class includes a significant number of Technician Plus licenses renewed as Technician.

BWHAHAHAHA Oh? The source of unreliable information cuts and pastes from others and adds a few of his own comments so it appears that the whole article came from him.

Saggytits Lee steps on his own tiny dick when he tried to correct
somebody else's English use first by saying one "operates" a dictionary

instead of reading it, then uses "things" instead of "thinks" in <jewish.reggae.roger@houston-hunks.com>:
"Translation: Woger can't figure out how to operate a dictionary, let alone correct someone else's language.But that's not surprising from someone who things that..."

Saggytits Lee manages to fumble again when he tried to backpedal on his improper use of words by once again mangling the sentence in reply <gweasy.long.hair@houston-hunks.com>:

"The word "operate" can be a synonym "use" in certain contexts"

Fuckup Stagger Lee <SLee@houston-hunks.com> proves he's as ignorant of music as he is in everything else when he utters the following stupidity in <k8mn.is.a.god@houston-hunks.com>:

"Eric Clapton even wrote a song about Leila!"

Staggering Drunk Lee, the "Pulitzer prize award-winning writer"
slobbered the following Ebonics in <9a56ue$hi...@dosa.alt.net>:
"I hope yourself takes the advice you are giving to yourself."

Of, course, Arf! Oaf! can't write any better either:

"Arf! Arf!" <DoggieD...@Liberalz.com> the ill-educated spelling champ fucks up again
in <2t1q7.4us.17.1@news.alt.net>:
"Jealoius?"

"Arf! Arf!" <DoggieDicksuc...@Liberalz.com> the spelling bee champ whined
about his womanless status in <bqtdlu$bp...@pita.alt.net>:
"Sisnce it is Satruday night, it is tiome to ghet a piuzza and make some anoinymous poists about Stagger Lee."

Arf!Arf! blissfully unaware of a British variation glady proclaims his ignorance in <bm5ctb$5n...@pita.alt.net>:
""Fantasises" That is "fantasizes", Wussman."

Perennial "Loser" Arf!Arf! spell lames but falls on his fatass in <bm5ctb$5n...@pita.alt.net>:
"What a losser."

The empty "cavity" that is Arf!Arf!'s skull fucks up again in <bm5ctb$5n...@pita.alt.net>:
"either of Roger's moist cavaties."

"Arf! Arf!" <Doggie Dicksuc...@Liberal.comz> vomited the following Ebonics in message news:9i6hai$5h9$0@pita.alt.net...
"Here we go, Rog. I be posting at three a.m."

Arf Arf shows his excitement when he gets his fatass handed to him and posts in Ebonics, the poor ill-educated thing never got his G.E.D. as shown in <a42sr2$so...@dosa.alt.net>:
"Curtian Boy"

Monkey boy "Arf! Arf!"
<DoggieDicksuc...@BetterThanRonaldReagan.com> gibbered incoherently when the prospect of fellating a dog is presented to him in <9fpehv$li...@dosa.alt.net>:
"Whoo hoo hoo hoo!!!"

"Arf! Arf!" <DoggieD...@Liberalz.comz> the spelling bee champ pondered the question of (corn) pone and why phone sound so similar in Message-ID:
<bj98gq$1i...@pita.alt.net>
"Grab a pone book and pick out a name, any name?"

NeoNAZI RACIST Fucktard "Arf! Arf!" <DoggieD...@Liberalz.com>shows his anti-Semetism, and ignorance about family names and their origins in <bqs1i5$25...@pita.alt.net>:
"Wiseman. That's Jewish, isn't it?"

Eternal FUCKUP "Arf! Arf!" <DoggieD...@Liberalz.comz> steps on his dick again in his "posts" <sic> (of "posit") in <bqjj2n$du...@pita.alt.net>:
"The trouble is, LRod, that your findings will do little, if anything, to dissuade or stop the posts which the two rascals posit as "fact".

Chronic alcoholic and child RAPER "Arf! Arf!" <DoggieD...@Liberalz.comz> gets egg on his "gruesome" face as he blathers more stupidity in <bmch5m$l4...@pita.alt.net>:
"...you're going to have yet more egg all over your guresome little face"

Arf Arf the donkeydicksucker proved he is the textbook definition of "DUMBASS" when he blathered the following, suggesting that Wiseman is the only ham ever to be retested ever in <adclen$l1m$0@pita.alt.net>:
"Hey Wiseman. How many Hams can you name right now who have been forced to retest? Besides yourself, that is."

Arf Arf shows his excitement when he lets his daughters give him head while he posts in his Ebonics <a42sr2soe0@dosa.alt.net>:

In your demented mind, post editing your original "CW" just changed the truth of the matter, didn't it?

The truth is, you couldn't even cuss in Morse code on your first attempt. In your case, that has rendered you speechless on CW.

One dead, one arrested after CB radio argument at Vancouver mall

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) -- A Vancouver man was shot to death Saturday in the parking lot of Westfield Vancouver mall following an argument over citizens band radio.

Kenneth Eichhorn, 47, died after surgery at Southwest Washington Medical Center, police said Saturday. Jon William Loveless, 44, also of Vancouver, was arrested for investigation of second-degree murder in the shooting.

Police responded about 1:30 a.m. Saturday to reports of multiple shots fired in the mall parking lot. Officers found the wounded Eichhorn in his pickup truck.

Loveless called 911 a short time later, reporting that he had been involved in a shooting. He was being held without bail in the Clark County Jail.

The two men apparently did not know each other, but got into an argument over CB radio before they met at the mall. Both men were armed, police said. The nature of the disagreement was not disclosed.

Later Saturday, CB users were still talking about the early-morning argument between "Ken" and "Brander."

Longtime CB user Noel Perkins, 41, of Vancouver said he often hears arguments over the radio. "It's part of the game," said Perkins, whose CB handle is Snakebite. "Some people take it seriously, some people don't."

A question well stated, Slow Code...
No, it is a telephone conversation. Period. And that is what the whole hobby will turn into if the self-righteous, lazy whiners get their way and code is, once and for all, abolished. They all have contributed to the hobby's deterioration so far and don't like the fact that a few of us have got their number and can assess them for what they are. What do these simple-minded idiots think will happen if, as they press forward, they get all testing removed? The simple fact is that this is all a set up so the frequencies can be auctioned to non ham interests. The morons in Newington whimper about the reduced ham population. Geez Louise...there are many times more hams today (including those with the "faux" ham licenses not requiring code) than in the post WWII ham "boom." Not enough?

No kids...this whole code thing and the watering down of the test is simply a matter dividing and conquering so "they" can come in and tell us that our numbers don't justify the spectrum. Then...pfssssst!!!...there goes one band after another.

If any of the no coders had any balls they'd be asking the fcc for real testing and redevelop the hobby into what it used to be instead of the inane weekend contesting and buffoons sitting there are sideband comparing which rigs have the most features.

Idiots.

Oh yeah, I really miss the days when the grouchy old what other problems I may, or may not, have is not up for public discussion by or for you.

and while we are on the subject, what about your ongoing (and very public) problems?

> The Internet went public in 1991, 15 years ago.

Basically true, but that's not the whole story by any means.

Until rather recently, personal computers were rather expensive. The IBM PC (introduced in August 1981) cost over $1500 in its basic configuration - which works out to about $3500 in 2006 dollars for a machine with very limited capabilities.

As recently as 10 years ago, a complete PC system with reasonable performance cost over $2000 - and its depreciation curve was very steep.

"The internet" was originally rather limited and not simple to access for the non-technically minded. That's all changed now.

On top of all this is the evolution of the PC from an expensive techno-toy to an everyday tool in most workplaces, schools, and homes. "Computer literacy" is now expected in most jobs.

The synergy of low cost, easy-to-use computers, easy and fast online access, and a reasonably computer-literate public has only come together within the past 10 years.

In that time, the number of US amateurs has actually dropped by over 17,000.

It should be noted that the number 737,938 includes not only those licenses which were current at the time, but also those which were expired but in the 2 year grace period. The number of then-current licenses was about 50,000 lower.

But you have never been "IN" amateur radio, Len.

Yet some pioneers (like Reginald Fessenden) were using voice communication as early as 1900, and had practical lomg-distance radiotelephony by 1906. AM broadcasting was a reality by 1920.

While some radio operators came from the ranks of landline telegraph operators, most did not, as it was predominantly young men who pioneered radio in the early part of the 20th century. The Morse Code used on landlines was "American" Morse, while that used on radio after 1906 was predominantly "International" or "Continental" Morse.

Why is that "outmoded"? What has replaced it?

So what? Amateurs choose the mode they want to use. What is wrong with choosing Morse Code and HF operation?

Some may say the Morse Code test is outmoded. But you are saying the use of Morse Code is outmoded!

FM broadcasting is the only radio service that uses stereo multiplex FM - is it outmoded?

What "formalism" do you mean, Len?

The use of call signs? Signal reports? Using only first names?

Amateur radio is among the least formal radio services I know.

How would you have amateurs operate?

So what's the problem with a standard procedures?

> Too many olde-tymers want to PRETEND

Not true, Len. We're amateurs - but that doesn't mean we have no standards and no procedures. The use of standard procedures makes it more fun and easier on everyone involved.

And a license to use a good chunk of that spectrum has been available without a Morse Code test for more than 15 years. But you have not taken advanatage of it.

Do you have a problem with youth, Len? Or simplicity?

Who pioneered the use of the HF spectrum, Len?

Who first established two-way HF radio contact?

The transistor was invented in 1948 - 58 years ago. Amateurs were using them in receivers and transmitters by the late 1950s.

Yet the predictions are not always correct. Openings happen when no opening is predicted, and predicted openings do not always happen.

And high-end audio...

So what? Those things are only one part of amateur radio. There's a lot more.

Of course not. That doesn't mean old things are all bad.

The phrase was "no kids, no lids, no space cadets, Class A operators only". It was used by a now-dead radio amateur who had the callsign W2OY. He did not use CW - he was an AM-only operator of the 1950s and 1960s.

The phrase is remembered because it was so unusual.

"CW" (aka Morse Code) is popular with many radio amateurs, not just "old timers".

Is there something wrong with the use of Morse Code, Len?

Actually that number is probably low, considering how many more go into use every day.

Millions?

And there lies the difference: Almost all other radio services require the use of only certified, channelized, no-user-adjustments-possible equipment. Most of those "millions" or transceivers cited are very low power and use only a single mode and a few channels. The user has almost no real control over the operation of the radio. This is most true in the case of the cell phone/

In other words, Len, you want to tell us what we should like and what we should not like. What we should enjoy and what we should not enjoy.

Too bad for him he wasn't a democrat, he would have gotten a free pass and the liberal main stream media would have tried to keep it quiet, but there would still be Matt Drudge, Michael Savage, Fox news, Rush Limbaugh and Sean Hannity to get the truth out. It's good we have voices like theirs to get the truth out. I hope the democrats are never able to silence free speech.

If we raise the CW speed to 20 WPM for all classes including the Tech class, hams will tend to study the theory more while they build up their code skill and they will understand the theory better and won't need to ask silly questions. So increasing the speed requirement will get us better & smarter hams.

Lazy people that don't want to learn anything will stay on CB and die in shoot-outs with each other in shopping mall parking lots which will help clean up the CB band. To me it looks like a Win Win situation. What do you think?

It's funny, the liberal democrat candidates commit fraud busing voters around from polling place to polling place to try and get elected. The tell them who to vote for at each polling place. The only thing they don't do is to tell them how to properly cast a vote so it can be counted.

well,
audio taped presentations are a good way (so are code practice programs for windows or linux). These also work well for the blind ham as well (handy ham inc. has a complete line of audiotaped presentation for learning more code, etc).

CW does have a rhythm to it, so thinking in musical terms and teaching as such might also be of benefit.

There are possibly many more, but these two points I can think of right off.

All Hail Fluffy!

Yes, it's that time again! On this month's ballot, a rarely-seen award: the Richard M. Nixon "Pathological Liar", and up for it are many old favourites and some new ones: Ed "Edmo Wollk00k" Wollmann, Richard the St00pid, Dickie "FreeSpeechStore" Scoville, Ray "Kazoo" Karczewski, BowTie, sPammy Russell, Will "Duck" Dockery, Daryl "Going to dog you all, I am"/<crickets chirping> Hunt, Ernie "you're all crazy farrel or his willnots" Primeau the snake-oil baldness-cure salesman of alt.baldspot, and, surprise of surprises, the Big 8 Management Board. Up for other awards are: Dustin "I outer filthed Rhonda because she had my emails and she was going to out me, I KNOW it!" Cook, several of the aforementioned k00ks, William "wcb"/the anti-SPOG Barwell, Jamie Baillie the spamming anti-spammer, Alan Jones the f'loon (from AMM-J), George Maloney the net.KKKop of rec.arts.marching.drumcorps, Wabbit (aka the possibly-ersatz Woger Wiseman (from Reston, VA, this guy), the legendarily-lame wannabe troll of RRAP and alt.flame), Duane "I can tell forgers and froggers apart from the real thing, just by reading headers" Arnold, J. Taylor & Don Findlay (of the "Expanding Earth" school of thought ("Plate tectonics? Piffle!)), Tim "I SUED SPAMHAUS AND WON!...What do you mean, I have to track them down and bring them into the proper jurisdiction myself to collect? Doesn't America rule the world?" Bolen, Dean Roger "If you can understand me, get yourself psychiatric help"/"teslacoils" Ray, bob&carole (the anti-pedo), Double-A, Ken "Kenny Kakes" Pangborn, Rob "Mop Jockey" Wolfe, Donald "I don't have to prove there's no god! Those theists and their claim that there 'might' be a deity -- feh!" Alford, and, from alt.baldspot again, Marcus Cox and Russ H, who don't care about the awards, but just want to use AUK to harass Ernie Primeau (Uh, no?), and have a good time getting each other off (verbally).

Hear Ye!
Now comes Woger Wabbit, chastising and cajoling others for their spelling gaffes. To quote "Wabbit", "Oh, the irony."
Below are actual misspellings garnered from Woger Wabbit's comments over the last two years. None are embellished upon save for the author's comments.
Obviously, Wabbit doesn't know how to operate a dictionary.
(Step on in "operating" a dictionary, Wabbit...open the darned thing!)

"sweallow" West Virginia phonics.

"srarrions". Your guess is as good as mine on this one.

"aboiut". Well, it's about "tiome".

"equivilent" Equi.what?

"Jealoius". Jelly? What?

"Sodmy". "C'mon over and you can sodmy yard". Dave Heil.

"Somebosy". Tech school talk?

"proive" The proife is in the pudding?

"moutgh" Rog has a moutgh full.

"spens". Do you spend it or spin it?

"Certailny: Woger is certailny stupid.

"Iliterate" What's an L here and there?

"entiorely" West Virginia phonics again.

"apoloigize" Only in Woger's warped mind.

"wiuth" Wiuth what??

"exaggerarte" Good one.

"eteranl" As in forever?

"ionly" Ions? Lonely? Who knows?

"expossed" Still no spell check.

"workibg" As in working?

"assulted" Darned typos!

"Georgaphy." Georgia on his mind?

"remibndded" It is hard to talk with your mouth full.

"corrpuption" Is that a dog?

"molsetred" Only 2Test knows.

"Whinyng". What?

"Plagairizing". Geesh

"emnpty" The inside of Roger's head.

"Linme" Transmission line?

"Getr" Nobody knows.

"Experieince" Wogie is good, ain't he?

"Appropiate" What kind of opiate?

"Laywer" Lay what?

"Visitpors" You never have any, ergo you don't know how to spell it.

"It's "complaintant," you sniveling weasel." (Roger Wiseman on spelling complainant.)

"Irreevant" Good going, Wogie.

"Forwared" Forward HO!

"Glady" Glad Bags?

"Neighborhod" It's a wonderful day in Wogie's neighborhood.

"Mena" Mean? What you mean, Wogie?

"Notr" Not?

"Sassifyed" ALA Rolling Stones.No Sassifaction..

"Fantasises" That is "fantasizes", Wussman.

"Illarate" West BY GOD Virginny!

"Reveresed" Must be one of those off-brand keyboards.

"Soem".as in Some? What a loser.

"VIRIN".What Wogie was before he met the Lavender Lads.

"Minisule".he mussa meant miniscule. Like his IQ.

"Champoin".Whassup, Wiseman? No dictionaries in the mental ward?

"Anoinymous"...a cross between anonymous and annoying?

"Acident" Roger's mom got preggers by accident.

"Alreaedy" Alright, already!

"Amouints" Roger amounts to nothing.

"Aposterphe" This guy is a hoot, ain't he?

"Basios"...word Woger uses when he gets neeeerrrrvous.
"Behing"...a cross between being and behind?

"Coiward" As in peeking from behind his mommy's curtains.
"Feamle"...I think he meant female.
"Losser"...only loser Roger can do it better.
"Ignroant"...typical, considering the source.
"Sluprs"...only Rogie knows what this means.
"Travelled"...a Rogerism, replete with ignorance.
"Postss"...pssst...Roger..that should be Posts.
"Defgenerate"...well, it's Roger's word...
"Faity"...he meant to say Fairy, but you know Roger.

"Ghet" Get a load of Curtain Boy!
"Distribiution"...Roger likes using phonics.
"Biotch"...he meant Bitch, but his phonics took over again.
"Methjadone"...a West Virginia substitute for Heroin.
"Sumbliminal"...one of Roger's favorites.
"Recepticle"...either of Roger's moist cavaties.

"Nlay"...a town in Maylaysia? Vermont?
"Al;ong"...only Wussman knows what this means.
"Becasu"...well, becasu Roger is not the brightest bulb on the tree.
"Seperation". Why? Because Roger cannot "seperate" from his mommie!
"Sisnce" He meant Since, but his pudgy little fingers slipped off the keys.
"gnetically" What?
"provce" (prove?)
"Piuzza" (West Virginia Pizza)
"Schol" (school?)
"strill" (still?)
"shoitgun" 12 ga or 20 ga?
"Snoip" (How they spell "snip" in Glen Dale)
"Maturbater". Wiseman does it all the time, he just can't spell it.(leaves a sticky residue on his right hand)
"Coskscuking". It's a Roger thing, as in Lavender Lads.

"Waddleing". Only in Glen Dale, eh?
"Spaeaking". Curtain Boy did this after his second retest.

" Stgop" Roger's version of Stop.

"Fahter's" He meant Father's Day.

"fserting"..would that be festering?

"poists". Roger meant "posts".

"snadwich" As in peanut butter and jelly?

"regualr" Glen Dale rendition of "regular".

"aftrer" After? Aftrer what?

"soory". Sorry Roger fucks up again.

"didnb't" He didn't?

"whoile". He ate the whoile thing?

"Woamn" He's hooked on West Virginia phonics, all right.

"prrof" And he kin prove it, too.

"beforfe" Was that before he lurned to spell?

"yoiuy" Roger's version of "y'all".

"illerate" Only illiterate Roger can spell like this.

"haeart" Aw, how heartless of me to laugh!

"valule" Roger has no values. No wonder he can't spell it.

"proch" Doesn't everyone have one on their house?

"inmstitution" Where Roger's mom put him in June 1999.

"timne" It's Howdy Doody time?

"whgo" What? Who dat?

"gnetically" Only Roger knows what this one means.

"crfy" Like, cry, Roger, cry.

"stutrtering" Some stutter, Wiseman stutrters.

"Whjere" Where is Curtain Boy?

"Webiste" That's Website to the rest of us.

"Youire" Your? You're? Who knows.

"fiored" As in fired?

"Parety" Roger gave a party once. Nobody came.

"Bouynce" Bounce?

"Varification" Verifiable mental case.

"Probelms" Poor Rogie.has many problems of the mental sort.

"Partricipate" Oh, DUH!!!!

"Cryed" Gee, Wogie..cry me a river.you dolt!

"Stoick" What a dork. His old 386 has no spell check program.

"Partiall" More WV Phonics, I see.

"Obsucred" Either obscured or Rogie has "sucre" on his mind.

"Infinate" Stupid. Think finite, Rogie.

"Sustinance" As in Sustenance?

"Juvinile". This is the way Roger likes his boys.

"Piut" Put it where, Rogie?

"Toyus". "Toyus R Us?

"Diminuative". Roger's height.

"Definitely" Definitely

"Percriptions" Say what?

"Credibiliy" More Glen Dale intellect.

"Thsoe" Yet another Glen Dale gaffe.

Heck. Maybe The Slickster and Janet could have used Halliburton to rebuild the World Trade Center the first time it was bombed. Or, and get this...how about if Halliburton would have rebuilt the USS Cole? Or the Marine barracks in Lebanon?
I bet a little bit of that Halliburton money could have easily rebuilt the Waco compound that Reno turned into a crematory...
But wait! Clinton was far too busy granting amnesty to home-grown terrorists (get that Hillary vote) while spending monies given him from Communist China.
And Clinton's gal, the Atty. General who advocated masturbation? Jocylen? Didn't she go obscure right after her son was arrested for drug sales?

Oh, and not let us forget Roger Clinton, the half-brother druggie supreme who snorted more Cocaine than a vacuum sweeper.

And last, but most importantly. 95% of the wealthiest people in this country pay 80% of the taxes gathered. The low earners, the ones you support, pay a pittance compared to the rich. Your claim is pure Democrat poppycock.

Mwhahahahhahahaha, isn't it done? Nice try DUMBASS!

The series of questions to Mark was done with a small bit of humor, but were based upon statements Markie had made in the past.
Yes, it was "jest" but Mark indeed has admitted on several occasions that he self-administers beer enemas to himself. Really! The fool actually admits to it!
Mark Morgan, the admitted Pagan slash Jew slash Bisexual once commented that he uses beer enemas to lessen the pain of his rectal issues/hemorrhoids.
Mark said that beer aids in lessening the nagging pain of his bothersome hemorrhoids.
We simply took it a step further in that some of us wanted to know if Mark prefers warm beer to cold, if he uses a small hose vs. a garden hose, if he administers Lite or Miller or Buttweiser and if he does so while standing, sitting or plopping his dyslexic ass over the neighborhood bar.
While I couldn't care much, the mental image of this dyslexic shoving a rubber tube up his rectum and pouring 12 ounces of Milwaukee's Best into a funnel does present a humorous image. Does Mark do this in the privacy of his own bathroom? Or does he sneak outside behind his car so he can "spew" into the grass afterwards?
And you gotta admit. Anybody who'd post a blog wherein they tell everybody that they are bisexual is reason enough to laugh at the clown. And beer enemas? More reason to laugh.
Put the two together? Wow! You have, in effect, a Doofus 42 year old man who is sure of his dual sexual proclivities, and one who uses beer in a manner that leaves the rest of us laughing.

Hey, Mark. I bet you were quite the attraction at your high school Keggers. While your buddies were holding the keg hose over their mugs to fill them, you were standing by waiting to shove the hose into your posterior to relieve those inflamed veins in your well-used rectum.

So, bottom line for you AUK landers who thought we were joking. Not so! Mark really DOES use beer as an enema.
Mark is on record as stating that he doesn't drink. That never stopped him from shoving a beer up his ass.

A poor 'hack-and-attack' interpretation. Read the entire quote: "We should relieve the burden on the rich by sending IRS agents out on the streets to shake down the homeless and senior citizens, huh?"

>I don't "need a clue" as that overused trite phrase of yours indicates.

Yes, and "poppycock" is so much more chic.

I didn't invent civilization. If you want to abandon it, that's up to you. Just remember that benefits don't come without responsibilities.

I don't want to give them my tax dollars any more than you do. I would much rather they earn their own livings and make contributions to society like the rest of us. But not all of them are malingerers; many of them have legitimate reasons for not being productive members of society. The most common reasons are psychological and emotional dysfunction, so I am very much in favor of providing mental health treatment for anyone. That's how to attack the cause of a problem (mental health) instead of throwing money at its effects (poverty).
Now how does that make me a liberal?

>How about we turn that around in that, "We pay off the beggars so they don't

We,

You think you are the only one? Get a clue. Supporting those who have no means to support themselves is one of the costs of living in a civilized society. If that concept evades your understanding, how about a translation from the Big Dummy's Guide to Republican Values:
"We pay off the beggars so they don't become theives and steal our shit, or get restless and overthrow the politicians that we bought and paid for with our hard-earned money."

I just did.

"Where did I say they did?"

Well, I copied and pasted your comment that, "by sending IRS agents out on the streets to shake down the homeless and senior citizens"

I guess that constitutes you saying "they did".

I don't "need a clue" as that overused trite phrase of yours indicates.
That is what I like about Liberals. Catch phrases such as "get a clue" or, "smell the coffee" are so easy to use.
So..living in a "civilized society", according to you, requires that I support the non-workers? The lazy? The druggies? Since when? According to who? You?
What gives YOU the authority to tell me that I should support the lazy, the unemployed?

Maybe you should get a copy of The Dummies Guide of Mooching.
Liberals are all too quick to "feel sorry" for the lazy, the non-earners but do little to help them. Oh, yeah..you want to give THEM my tax dollars...but to what end?

How about we turn that around in that, "We pay off the beggars so they don't become theives and steal our shit", and we do it with more and more taxes and handouts. Of course the beggars remain thieves, they count on the "dole" and they will steal you and me blind, given the opportunity.

What have you solved???

Oh my! You (ivtie) me into your world? No thanks. I'll pass on that one, good buddy. (loosey) spelling? You are hilarious in your futile crappie flopping around all subjects. Well, all except your sexual deviations and disgraceful use of beer. You seem to love talking about both.

Now, when I "grow up and get a life", does that mean I have to engage in sex with men and douche my ass with beer as you do? I'll pass.

Poor Billy, sitting on his fat ass in his parents' unfinished basement.

BILLY SMITH STEPS ON HIS OWN DICK THUSLY WITH THESE FUCK-UPS:

Billy "I can't read" Smith fucks up again when he claims in <gsJRg.2244$o71.124@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"By the way, weren't you required to retest per a letter from FCC enforcement bureau? Shall we post the record for all to see again? They

committed rules violations."
Billy can't read the ARRL website which states:
NOTE: Issuance by the FCC of a Warning Notice indicates that the FCC
has what it believes to be reliable evidence of possible rules
infractions and not necessarily that the recipient has violated FCC rules. The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered
by a volunteer examiner.

Billy "Dumbass who can't put together a sentence" Smith shows off those English skills, quite ironically in <VfQHf.14581$rH5.8121@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"That's interesting there idiot. I bet you really did flunk high school math and probably elementary too. Oh thats right, wasn't that when was in Floriduh. Spelled Florida but the DUH is for your Dumb Ass."

"wasn't that when was in Floriduh" - Billy makes good fuck up!

Billy "shoots" himself in his palsied club foot once again in Message-ID <Q0bJf.19641$vU2.7735@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Roger, shots himself in the foot"

Billy the "Rhodes" scholar fucks up again and even demonstrates he is an imbecile in <8uqwg.8275$vO.7632@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>:
"Right you are, wannabe Rhode's Scholar!"

Billy the illiterate retard Smith screws up again, and his illiteracy is exposed. "It serves him right."
in<hauKf.1410$S25.940@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Deserves him right."

Billy "retard" Smith confesses to his generally accepted retarded
status in <LwpLf.2321$F56.2317@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"I'm a general retard. bwhahaha"

Billy "spelling champ of the general retards" Smith admits his bad hygiene but is still in denial about his English skills in <QxpLf.2322$F56.1169@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>
"Sure I can spell and smell."

"Billy" the NOtwordSmith fucks up again with this incompete sentence in <qgyNf.5576$S25.341@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"So when you got divorced boy, did your finally figure out that your more"

Billy "cumgargler" Smith managed to awaken from his drunken stupor to slobber
in <fbIOf.442$sL2.25@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Isn't that you mom weighed"

Mr."Education" Billy Smith steps on his own dick again when he talks about others' "educations" (or educatiion" as he spells it) in <w7IOf.436$sL2.167@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Uh, huh. Right LOSER. Still smoking that dope again? By the way how is your
so called educatiion actually doing for you? Those online classes."

<B9IOf.439$sL2.255@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"You're whole life has been exhaled before."

Billy "illiterate retard" Smith spikes the "HUH?" factor in this slobbering in <MGqUf.16833$S25.8455@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"Come on, do it just have you some spiked Kool Aid."

"Didn't" your special-Ed teacher teach you how to spell, Billy?
in <OCqUf.16826$S25.10695@newsread1.news.atl.earthlink.net>:
"...didnt Marie teach you to play nice"

"Rhodes scholar" Billy Lardass Davies Smith blunders and blows his cover again in <Et%0g.6340$sq5.1769@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>: "Rhode's scholar Scheissman blows his cover again."

Billy "dumbass" Smith steps on his own tiny dick when he tries to criticize others' typos,but he doesn't "perform" well as usual with his blatant "stupidity" in <oCk1g.5958$Es3.3907@newsread3.news.atl.earthlink.net>: "Noteed!!!!!!!!!!!!! Bwhahahahahahah. You're a brilliant one Scheissman.
You even peform stupid acts on your blatant stupidty"

Billy "dropout Lardass" Smith steps on his own dick when he tries to comment on others' spelling abilities, but he "can't" do any better in Message-ID: <mQr3g.8970$sq5.4914@newsread2.news.atl.earthlink.net>: "Woger cant spell very well anyway."

Billy "dropout pizza BOY" Smith fucks up his sentence again when he blathered in <WdZfg.629$lp.259@newsread3.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "How about those retest letter you received for jamming."

Billy "illiterate " Smith claims to have been in the Library, but he can't even spell "I've" correctly, maybe Billy should check out the English tutoring books there in WpFgg.1310$lf4.1288@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Ive been to quite a few libraries on Sunday and a lot of them are open."

Billy Smith "the" ill-educated moron fucks up again in <4zxLg.15720$Qf.5115@newsread2.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Roger is about to finally have th final episode where..."

Billy Smith stumbles on his club foot in his fat mouth when he tries to claim "hillbillies" are somehow inferior(he squeaks from "experience"?) in <7CdRg.11366$v%4.8492@newsread1.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Is that another fine quality of the Hillbilly state? You know, that third world one where you live full of miscegenation, inbreeding, and the like. Speaking from experrience again?"

Billy the spelling bee champ Smith fucks up again while trying to make fun of others' typos and pegs the irony meter in <my5Sg.1536$Y24.130@newsread4.news.pas.earthlink.net>: "Would that by "that" Woger? How abou that Todd rather than "Taod"?"

WELL THE SOUTH SIDE OF GLEN DALE IS THE FAGGOT SIDE OF TOWN AND IF YOU GO DOWN THERE YOU BEST BEWARE OF A PUNK NAMED WOGER WISEMAN

NOW WOGER IS A FAGGOT STAND ABOUT 5 FOOT FOUR
ALL THE DOWNTOWN JOHNS CALL HIM LOOSE SPHINCTER LOVER HIS MOTHER CALL HIM 'HOE

CHORUS AND IT'S BAD BAD WOGER WISEMAN
THE BADDEST PUNK IN THE WHOLE CELL BLOCK
BADDER THAN RICHARD SIMMONS AND FATTER THAN NAT KING COLE

NOW WOGER HE'S A PUSSY
AND HE LIKES HIS PURPLE CLOTHES
HE LIKES TO WEAR HIS FISHNET HOSE, UNDER EVERYONE'S NOSE
HE GOT CUSTOM PINK PANTIES
HE GOT A FRENCH TICKLE TOO
HE GOT A 32 INCH DILDO IN HIS POCKET FOR FUN
A VIBRATOR IN HIS SHOE

(REPEAT CHORUS)

NOW FRIDAY 'BOUT A WEEK AGO
WOGER SUCKIN' DICK AND AT THE END OF THE YARD
SAT A BROTHER NAMED BINKIE AND OO THAT GUY LOOKED NICE WELL HE CAST HIS EYES UPON HIM AND THE TROUBLE SOON BEGAN CAUSE WOGER LEARNED A LESSON
BOUT MESSIN' WITH A PUNK OF A JEALOUS BITCH

WELL THE PUNKS TOOK TO BITCH SLAPPIN' AND WHEN THEY PULLED THEM FROM THE BED
ROGER'S LARD ASS LOOKED LIKE A BLOODY PUZZLE WITH AN EXTRA HOLE!

WOGER
(Xemblinkosky/Davies)

He lives in a trailor park somewhere in West Vagina Where he drinks down cum in the faggot bars and it tastes just like his mommy's Vagina,
See-oh-el-aye stinky Vagina!
He walked up to a fag and asked him to dance
And he'll tell you his name in a real girlie voice
El-oh-el-aye Woger, Wo-wo-wo-Woger!

Now Wiseman's not the most physical guy
But when he sucks your cock he'll inhale your spine
Oh my Woger Wo-Wo-Wo-ger!
Wo-ger Wo-Wo-Wo-ger!
Well Woger's real dumb and he can't understand Why he walk like a woman but gets butt fucked like a man
Oh my Wo-ger Wo-Wo-Woger!

Well he drank a lot of cum and pranced all night,
Under his terrible overbite
Woger found a black man and sat down on his knee,
He said pretty brother will you make me a G?
Well that guy was a bum and wino but really fell for his Wo-ger Wo-Wo-Wo-ger!
He push him to the floor
Woger got down on his knees
He looked at his pecker
He inhaled till he sneezed!

Well that is the way Woger wants to stay
Wo-Wo-Wo Wo-ger
Woger is a boy but dresses like a girl
He lives in a muddled faggot world
Wo-Wo-Wo Wo-ger

Well Woger left home just a week before He'd only had sex with his mommy before Well Woger's not the most masculine of fags
But he knows he is in drag,
Oh Wo-ger
Wo-Wo-Woger! Wo-Wo-Wo-Wo-ger!

BILLY, DON'T BE A ZERO

Vocal: Bo Donaldson & The Heywoods

[Words and Music by Mitch Murray and Peter Robin Callander]

The gay pride band came down along Main Street
The Village People fell in behind
I looked across and there I saw Billy Smith
Waiting to go and join the line
And with her head upon his shoulder
Mary, his old and hideous she-male mommy
>From where I stood, I saw she was cryin'
And through her tears I heard her say

"Billy, don't be a zero, don't be a fool all your life"
"Billy, don't be a zero, you can go back to school at night"
And as he started to go she said "Billy, keep your your head back as you blo-o-ow"
"Billy, don't be a zero, don't forget we can give 'em a two for one you know"

The whining faggots were trapped in a alley
The gay orgy raging all around Dick Sergeant cried "We've got to hang on, boys"
"We got to hold this piece a'ground"
"I need a volunteer to ride me"
"And bring us back some extra men"
And Billy Smith's hand was up in a moment
Forgettin' all the words she said

Everybody said
"Billy, don't be a zero, don't be a fool all your life"
"Billy, don't be a hero, you can go back to school at night"
And as he started to go she said "Billy, keep your head back as you blo-o-ow"
"Billy, don't be a hero, don't forget we can give 'em a two for one you know"

I heard his she-male mommy got a letter
That told how Billy swallowed that day
The letter said that he was a zero
She should be proud he swallowed that way

I heard she threw that letter away

[military drums and fifes to end]

It was twenty years ago today,
Roger Wiseman forced the boys to be gay
He's been going in and outa their rears
And he's made them into ravin' queers.
So watch out or I'll force on you
The act we've hated all these years,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

We're Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band, Disciples of the Bucktoothed Choad,
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band,
Sit back and watch us shoot a load.
Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound, Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.
It's wonderful to be here,
But Wiseman's full of crap,
The dirty goddamn pederast:
That fucker gave us syphilis,
That fucker gave us clap.

I don't really want to stop the show,
But I thought you had all better know,
That Wiseman's going to play a song,
On a stickpin that he stuck through his schlong.
So let me introduce to you
The one and only Bucktoothed Choad
And Roger Wiseman's Greyhound Men's Room Band.

I read the newsgroup today oh boy
There's posts by a retard who can't make the grade
And though Stagger Lee's posts are rather sad
Well I just had to laugh
He makes stupid statements that always lack facts
Stagger Lee blew his mind out, didn't have to go far
He didn't notice his thoughts were flawed
All the posters read and stared They'd seen Stagger's idiocy before Nobody was really sure
If he was just stupid or bored

I saw his buddy LLoyd too oh boy
He posted some crap he just stole Crowds of lurkers just plonked away
But I just had to look Having an idea he's just a kook Stagger Lee would love to turn you in Stagger woke up, got out of bed,

Got up and logged on instead Found his way to radio newsgroups
And looking up some people to hate Found some lies and posted that Made excuses in seconds flat
Found the abuse email and he waits
Somebody flames him and he went into a wet dream

(Ahhhhhh ahhhhhhh ahhhhhhh ahhhhhhh ahhhhhhh'll turn you innn to your iiisssspppp ahhhhhhhh ahhhhhhh ahhhhhh ahhhhh ahhhhhhhh'll turn you innnnnnnnn)

I read the newsgroup today oh boy
Four thousand holes in SLee's stories here
And though his brain is rather small
Any typos he has to count them all Now he knows how many typos it takes To fill the Albert Hall

SLee would love to... turn... you... in

The cesspool comes from the profanity and perversions of Morkie.

And I doubt that your "authority" is "good". There are already a dozen different "discussion groups", and few, if any, actually carry out any true "discussion". I, on the otherhand, have found the professional press to be far more effective than this place.

Honest people with honest names, willing to stand by thier comments and convictions.

Not slap-and-run cowards such as yourself.

Arf lived in Cincinnati? Was his house near one of those Cincinnati coal mines?

If you think you're addressing me, UnWiseman, my mother never lived in Cincinnati much less owned a home there.

I wrote a chronological synopsis. If you need more material, you can crib from Robert X. Cringely and/or dozens of others.

If you need a "whole story" then WRITE one and get it published. You are the self-styled knowitall "expert" who tells everyone else what to write correctly and not correctly, what to like and not like. You know everything, yes? Of course you do...you are a code-tested amateur extra.

>Until rather recently, personal computers were rather expensive.

Define "recently." The prices for complete personal computer systems, components have been constantly dropping since the beginning of 1982.

Five years ago a complete PC sold for $500 plus tax at Lowes near Gig Harbor, Washington. Hewlett-Packard brand no less! :-)

Complete PCs - and laptop portables - can be purchased today at Fry's on the west coast for $500; go to www.outpost.com to see their mail-order products.

>The >IBM PC (introduced in August 1981) cost over $1500 in its basic >configuration - which works out to about $3500 in 2006 dollars for a >machine with very limited capabilities.

The IBM representative showing off their PC at Rocketdyne in early 1982 was NOT taking orders in "2006 dollars."
The Treasury Departement would have arrested both reps and IBM Corporation had they done so.

"Limited capabilities?" Only by today's standard. In the early 1980s the first IBM PCs were the EQUAL in power of any 16-bit minicomputer then on the market. Try to keep your time frame focussed. And cite your hands-on experience with either designing, building, or using minicomputers for a comparison. Feel free to indulge everyone on your 64-bit mainframe computer expertise.

>As recently as 10 years ago, a complete PC system with reasonable >performance cost over $2000 - and its depreciation curve was very >steep.

You did not do any "dumpster diving" for parts to build your own PC? Why not? Can't you build a functional IBM PC clone for just $100 in parts? Do you think you need morse code skills to program computer code?

I know a few folks who have built whole new PC-compatible computers for LESS than $250 in parts cost. Three years ago.

>"The internet" was originally rather limited and not simple to access >for the non-technically minded. That's all changed now.

Neither the Internet ("world wide web") nor commands for browsers accessing the Internet have changed in 15 years.

Define "technically minded." Did PC users need university degrees to access the world wide web? I don't think so.

>On top of all this is the evolution of the PC from an expensive >techno-toy to an everyday tool in most workplaces, schools, and homes.
>"Computer literacy" is now expected in most jobs.

Jailhouse guards, housewives, nannies don't need "computer literacy." They can all be amateur radio licensees, though.

>The synergy of low cost, easy-to-use computers, easy and fast online >access, and a reasonably computer-literate public has only come >together within the past 10 years.

Yawn. Robert X. Cringely you are NOT. :-)

Why are you trying to tell me what to believe and not believe? Why do you think YOUR "computer history" is "more accurate" than mine? Have you built ANY personal computer from scratch? No? I have. Two of them, in fact. It was fun to do so for me. Why are you trying to tell me what I "should" be having fun with?

You are not a member of the IEEE, a Professional Association. I am a Life Member of the IEEE. Are you or have you ever been a voting member of the ACM (Association for Computing Machinery)? I have. [got the stupid T-shirt "Dragon in a Member" slogan on the front...but it was free...<shrug>]

Why are you always telling me what to like, not like, enjoy, not enjoy, what to post, what not to post?

What is wrong with live and let live?

>But you have never been "IN" amateur radio, Len.

Tsk, that old ploy once again...

Now, now, calm down, Jimmie. You have NEVER been IN the military yet you have NO reservations about telling all the military and its veterans what to do, how they should do it, how "wrong" they were in not doing it as you said it should be done.

Amateur radio "differs" from other radio services only in man-made regulations and the fantasies of its licensees. There is NO DIFFERENCE in the basic physical laws governing radio or radio waves versus all other radio services.

Electrons, EM fields and waves follow THEIR rules, not the imaginations of the ARRL and its members...or the legislations of human law-makers.

If Miccolis' logic is "correct" in who is able to talk about, govern, regulate, etc. amateur radio, then the very first amateur licensee and the very first radio regulating agency have been ILLEGAL from the start. Id est, the unlicensed would NOT have been IN amateur radio, therefore they could not do anything. You see the fallacy of your argument?
[you wouldn't admit it if it came up and bit your butt]

Your "IN" argument in reference to amateur radio is therefore not only incorrect, it is nonsense.

You wish to quibble word definitions in order to score message points and thereby show your alleged superiority? Id est, one must be "IN" amateur radio in order to "do" something about it. Nonsense.

In regulations that is also fallacious. None at the FCC need be licensed "IN" the amateur radio service in order to REGULATE it or any US civil radio service.
NONE. Not the Commissioners, not any of the staff.

Tsk, tsk, you do not negatively criticize the FCC yet they are NOT "IN" US amateur radio. Why is that?

Under the Constitution of the United States, citizens may freely express their desires to the government of the United States. [the formal wording is "petition the government for the redress of their grievances"] That includes ALL laws, legislation thereof, regulations and rules imposed by the government.

Yet YOU wish to exclude the nearly 299 million citizens who are NOT amateur radio licensees (your definition of being "IN" amateur radio is being granted that license) from doing anything at all except obeyance of YOUR desires and ONLY those of other amateur licensees. That is dictatorial, totalitarianism, and general bullshit 'territory' thinking that is akin to some neighborhood street gang.

You do not "own" amateur radio nor do you have ANY qualifications to "rule" on it. You've NEVER been IN any government regulating agency, indeed never been IN government, yet you wish to exclude millions just on YOUR "definition" of who can say what and to whom.

"PRACTICAL?!?" What is "PRACTICAL" about inserting a single carbon microphone in series with the antenna lead-in to 'brute force' modulate a CW carrier?!?

You have never 'ridden gain' in broadcasting at an audio control board to make "PRACTICAL" audio broadcasting, yet you DEFINE "practicality" in such things as inserting a single carbon microphone in series with the antenna for broadcasting.

For a double-degreed education in things electrical you just displayed a surprising amount of ILL logic and definite misunderstanding of the real definition of "practical."

>AM broadcasting was a reality by 1920.

Superfluous minutae.

YOU have NEVER been IN broadcasting. Your amateur radio license does NOT permit broadcasting. I have been IN broadcasting, still have the license (now lifetime).

NO, repeat NO amplitude-modulation broadcaster uses your so-called "practical" means of modulating a CW carrier. NONE. Had Fessenden's EXPERIMENT been at all practical, others would have used that technique. NONE did.

PR bullshit you fantasize. You were NOT among the "pioneers of radio" and you have NO demographics to prove the ages, let alone a poll or listing showing that. All you have is some bowdlerized, very edited versions of radio history from the ARRL.

Here's a plain and simple fact: Landline telegraphy was already changing from manual to teleprinter by the year 1900. That changeover continued until the middle of the 1900s until ALL the landline telegraph circuits were either shut down or replaced by electromechanical teleprinters.

>The Morse Code

Superfluous minutae. Manual telegraphy consisted of closing and opening a circuit. That has never changed.
There are dozens, if not hundreds, of different versions of on-off telegraphy which have been developed, NONE of them modeled on either "International" or "Continental" AMERICAN morse code or any English-language representation.

Now, now, Jimmie, you are assigning some "blame" on a plain and simple factual statement: "Amateur radio is the ONLY [US] radio service still using morse radiotelegraphy for communications purposes."

What I wrote is a plain and simple fact.

You seem to be in denial, unable to accept a plain and simple fact. Your problem, not mine.

>Some may say the Morse Code test is outmoded. But you are saying the >use of Morse Code is outmoded!

Yes, in every other radio service except amateur.

You seem to be in denial, unable to accept a plain and simple fact. Your problem, not mine.

>FM broadcasting is the only radio service that uses stereo multiplex FM
>- is it outmoded?

There is NO SUCH THING as "stereo multiplex FM" mode.

FM broadcasting is NOT the "only radio service" using stereophonic audio modulation. Stereophonic audio modulation is NOT required by FM band broadcasters. Those broadcasters MAY use stereophonic audio OR they may use monophonic audio plus a SUBCARRIER separate audio channel OR they may use stereophonic audio PLUS the subcarrier audio. The term "multiplex" applies to SEPARATE information sources, not stereophonic audio. All of that is very much in use today.

DTV (Digital TeleVision) broadcasting carries QUADRAPHONIC audio (optional, may be monophonic or stereophonic) with or without extra separate audio subchannels, with or without audio text ("Teletext") accompanying the video. That is very much in use today and for the foreseeable future of American TV broadcasting.

Some AM broadcasters are still using the Motorola C-QUAM system for stereophonic broadcasting where each stereo "channel" takes one of the two DSB sidebands. While that system works well, the AM broadcasting listener market has NOT received it well enough to warrant more than a few broadcasters adopting it or any similar AM stereophonic system. It appears to be on the way out due to listener non-acceptance.

"Shortwave" broadcasting is still "testing" Radio Mondial system which is capable of stereophonic audio transmission. Technically the system works very well. The increased cost of receivers and the general downturn in world interest in "shortwave" broadcasting might result in a future discontinuance. Note: What was once "shortwave" radio broadcasting is increasingly shifting over to satellite relay and VoIP dissemination rather than maintaining the HF transmitters; program content remains the same.

The International Civil Airways VOR (Very high frequency Omnidirectional radio Range) system ground stations ALWAYS broadcast with a subcarrier (9.96 KHz) that is FMed with the reference magnetic azimuth bearing phase. The RF output is amplitude modulated with 30% AM so that any receiver can determine its magnetic bearing to the ground station by comparing the demodulated reference phase with the main AM phase. Relatively simple receiver demod that was devised in vacuum tube architecture times. In use since 1955 worldwide, no foreseeable discontinuance in the future despite wider use of GPS.

Multi-channel (many "multis") using FM was once the choice of trans-continental microwave radio relay, the linkage across the USA that made national TV and 'dial-anywhere' long distance telephony possible. It has been largely replaced by optical fiber relay using digital multiplexing of voice and TV channels using digital modulation of laser light. The longest (to date) fiber-optic relay is the long, long like between London and Tokyo through the Mediterranean Sea past Saudi Arabia, India, around southeast Asia, past the Phillippines. Most of it under water. Optical "pumping" with a second optical wave-length is used for amplification to avoid electronic repeater amplifiers. Such optical pumping (amplification) is not possible with microwave RF radio relay.

There are many different other examples of "FM"-like modulations at work daily in HF and on up into the micro-waves. The most common is the various adaptations of the common dial-up modem using combinatorial amplitude and phase modulation of an audio carrier wave. Those are the

"TORs" (Teleprinter Over Radio) used for data communications in maritime service; voice is done via SSB and may be simultaneous with the data. This is on-going in use and for the foreseeable future.

The FIRST HF Single Sideband circuits (since the beginning of the 1930s) used combinatorial modulations. The 12 KHz bandwidth was composed of four 3 KHz wide separate one-way channels. Each 3 KHz (voice bandwidth) channel could carry up to 6 frequency-shift-modulated teleprinter channels. The common arrangement worldwide (by both commercial and government users) was to use two 3 KHz channels solely for voice/telephony and the remaining two for 8 to 12 TTY circuits (number dependent on the redundancy required to overcome selective fading). While those "commercial" SSB circuits were numerous from the 40s on into the 70s, their number has dwindled due to better throughput and reliability from satellite radio relay services.

Was there anything else technical about communications and/or broadcasting that you wanted to erroneously state?

1. The "official" 'Radiogram' form sold by the ARRL for use in "official" message relay by amateurs.
Obvious play-acting AS IF the amateur relay was by "official" means a la Western Union or similar REAL telegraphic message. :-)

2. The monotonic HI HI HI on voice to denote a 'laugh.'
Done with little or no inflection and hardly normal
to genuine laughter. [jargon from telegraphic shorthand where inflection and tonality of real laughter is not possible]

3. Gratuitous signal level and readability "reports" to other stations AS IF they were solidly received when they are not.

4. Carrying over many, many "Q" code three-letter shorthands from telegraphy on voice where the plain words would have worked just as well. Jargon use has the appearance of being a "professional" service
but it is just jargon, a juxtaposition of short-hand
used in different modes.

5. The seeming inability to express anything but in a flat monotone on voice, despite the subject (if any) under discussion. Most of the time such voice contacts seem devoid of the transmitting operator's ability to convey any emotion beyond boredom.

6. The over-use of call signs instead of legal names in non-radio conversation, communication, and image displays...AS IF the license grantee were a REAL radio station or radio broadcaster.

7. The non-radio self-definition of a licensee as being "federally authorized radio station (or operator or both)." Elevation of self-importance beyond what the amateur radio license GRANT is about.

8. The non-acceptance of the word "hobby" for the real activity of radio amateurs AS IF they were somehow a national service to the country.

9. The falsity of redefining the word "service" (amateur radio service, were 'service' means a type and kind of radio activity of all) into that "national service" akin to anything from a para-military occupation to an important "resource" that would always "save the day when all other infrastructure communications services 'failed'."

10. The falsity of assuming that amateur radio is PRIMARILY an "emergency" communications resource. Regardless of the pomposity of many self-righteous amateurs and thousands of words and redefinitions written, the amateur radio service is still an avocational radio activity done for personal pleasure WITHOUT pecuniary compensation.

>Amateur radio is among the least formal radio services I know.

Besides listening-only to radio broadcasting service, what DO you "know" about OTHER radio services?

You know NOTHING of military radio. You never served, never worked with the military. I did both as a soldier and as a civilian.

You know NOTHING about any form of broadcasting from the transmitting end or even studio/location procedures and technology. I've been involved with broadcasting at the station end since 1956.

You know NOTHING of Public Land Mobile Radio Services, never had one. I did.

You know NOTHING of Aircraft Radio Service, protocal or procedures, or of actual air-air or air-ground comms. I've done that, both air-air and air-ground.

You know NOTHING of Maritime Radio Service, what goes on and what is used. I've used it on the water, both in harbors and inland waterways.

You MIGHT know something of Citizens Band Radio Service. CBers out-number amateurs by at least 4:1, could be twice that. I've been doing that since 1959.

You MIGHT know something about Personal Communications Radio Services other than CB (R-C is not strictly a communications mode, it is tele-command)...such as a cellular telephone. No "call letters," "Q" codes, or radiotelegraphy are used with cell phones. One in three Americans has one. Do you have one. I do.

>> Too many olde-tymers want to PRETEND

>Not true, Len. We're amateurs

Don't you forget it.

>And a license to use a good chunk of that spectrum has been available >without a Morse Code test for more than 15 years. But you have not >taken advanatage of it.

I have USED my COMMERCIAL radio operator license to operate on FAR MORE EM SPECTRUM than is allocated to amateurs. LEGAL operation. In most cases of such work NO license was required by the contracting government agency. [the FCC regulates only CIVIL radio services in the USA, NOT the government's use]

When did YOU "legally" operate below 500 KHz? Have you EVER operated on frequencies in the microwave region? [other than causing 2.4 GHz EMI from your microwave oven] Have you transmitted ANY RF energy as high as 25 GHz? I have transmitted RF from below LF to 25 GHz. I have done that since 1953...53 years ago.

What would you have me "take advantage of" in "good chunks" of the EM spectrum? "Work DX at 10 GHz?!?" :-) :-) :-)

I've once "worked" 250,000 miles (approximately) "DX" with a far-away station above 2 GHz but below 10 GHz. What have YOU done above 3/4 meters? READ about it?

Oh, yes, now you are going to "reply" with the standard ruler-spank that I did not do that with "my own" equipment. :-)

Well, now YOU have a quandry. To use that stock "reply" of yours you MUST define that the "taxpayer SUBSIDIZES" anything of the government or contracted work by the government. In your "logic" then, I really DO "own" that equipment!

But, if you say I don't then you have to take back your INSULT to all military servicemen and servicewomen that they "receive a SUBSIDY from the taxpayer." I will NOT "own that equipment" if you take that insult back.

YOU don't think your remark was an "insult." You've tried to rationalize your way out of that three ways from Sunday since. Well then, I "do" "own" that equipment and did get experience using "my own" equipment!

>> It has exciting possibilities...except for the >> rutted and mired olde-tymers unable to keep up with new

>Do you have a problem with youth, Len? Or simplicity?

Other than NOT ENOUGH of either, NO.

YOU are NOT young, Jimmie. Face it. You've hit the halfway mark and are downhill all the way since.
YOU are MIDDLE-AGED, growing older.

YOU never "pioneered radio" in your life. All you did was try to fit in to the present...and then rationalized
by implication that you somehow did some "pioneering."

You imply that you are "superior" because of achieving an amateur extra class license largely through a test for morsemanship. Manual radiotelegraphy hasn't been "pioneered" by you.

>The transistor was invented in 1948 - 58 years ago.

1947. The PATENT wasn't granted immediately. :-)

>Amateurs were using >them in receivers and transmitters by the late 1950s.

Early. Like 1952. See QST or CQ (forget which) which I saw at Fort Monmouth in that year. Transistors made by Philco (?). Whatever it was, the transistors have long been obsolete, out of production, replaced by newer, better, cheaper types.

Jimmie, quit contradicting those who were IN the radio-electronics industry or work who worked through all that period. As a double-degreed whizzy something you should KNOW that REAL PRACTICAL transistors for HF use didn't come into being until much later than the late 1940s.

There's a whole heaping gob of documents of history of the solid-state era, how it began, all the trouble everyone had to make them work, to make them reliable, to make them cheap. Much of that is now on the web.
Go do some study of something OTHER than ARRL
"radio history" for your own edification. That is, if you can really tear yourself away from Big Brother.

To me, the history of the industry is interesting. To you it is little more than some obscure footnote you hunt for in order to use in messages where you claim your respondent is "wrong" or "in error." :-) Come back when you've actually DESIGNED some solid-state ham radio, not just assembled a kit designed by someone else. Use those mighty collitch degrees, all that radio-electronics "experience" in the "industry" to show us what you can really do. :-)

724. Amateur Extras Can't be TOLD What to Do!

You are in ERROR. I wasn't writing "other words." If I wanted to write "other words," I would have written other words.

My advocacy is to elimintate the code test for an FCC
amateur radio operators license.

Do you spend all your time TAKING TESTS?

If so, what have you done to require taking tests all the time?

If not, why are you so concerned about OTHERS taking code tests?

If morse code radiotelegraphy is so wonderful, great, noble,
"saves lives [not really]," traditional-that-all-MUST-take one, then what are you upset about? If it is that "good," then all will flock to it in great numbers.

NOT having a code test does NOT require ANYONE to "do" something as in having to take a code test. They cannot "do" something that isn't there to DO.

Are you upset that OTHERS who come later will not do as you did? Why is what you HAD to do required of all OTHERS?

What is wrong with live and let live?

ELIMINATE. As in NOT having to do something.

A change of amateur radio regulations concerning the code test, to ELIMINATE it so OTHERS don't have to DO it.

Yet you say I "tell others what to do." Why do you tell such untruths? Why do you put your words over mine AS IF I wrote them? Had I wanted "other words" written, I would have written them.

How can anyone "DO" something that is not required to do?

Why are you telling ME what to do, think, write? Answer that.

What is wrong with live and let live?

Do you ENJOY taking code tests? Do you think others
"enjoy taking code tests?" No? Well why do you say I "write in other words" when my advocacy is for NOT doing something?

Why do YOU feel ALL should enjoy taking code tests?

Why do YOU think the FCC should keep on with code tests?
Or are you really telling all that only YOU can determine what the FCC decides? Very strange, almost totalitarian.

Why do you wish to be "judge" on what I think, do, write?
Why do you wish to be "judge" on what OTHERS should think,
do, write? Are you a god? VERY totalitarian.

Do you consider yourself "above" all others that you can tell OTHERS what to like, not like, enjoy, not enjoy?
Why is that?

Have I "told you" what bands to operate on, which mode to use, when to use them? NO.

You have already taken a 20 word-per-minute code test. You have achieved the OLD amateur extra rank with status and privilege (all lobbied for by older amateurs who are morsemen). Why are YOU telling OTHERS what to do?

Eliminating the code test will NOT require any newcomer to "do" anything. No one can "do" something that isn't there to do.

Why do you want ham radio to be like CB then by dumbing down exams? Or are you just saying that because you're a typical lazy-ass Kanadian that believes everything should be a government hand-out with no work required?

Omega One went tits up. No one listens now. The FCC knew Todd wouldn't be able to keep an HF station running 24/7 so why waste a stamp to send him a Markie uses it on 11 meters. He transmits to Roger and Lloyd when he hears skipland on CB. They love to hear his beer farts when they can't be there in person to enjoy the smell. Lloyd has big woofer speakers in his pizza delivery car. He like to play Markies farts loud when the skipland is rolling in. Roger likes to hear the farts because he is too loose to do his own farting. Prison life will do that to you.

And half a century ago those VHF/UHF hams had passed a code test. They weren't no-coders, they were motivated and did what it took. Today's no-codes aren't motivated and don't want to make an effort, therefore they're probably not going to be motivated to move things forward either.

As most wealthy people incorporate any income over ~$200k, those figures make sense but I still find it had to believe that corporations, millionaires and billionaires get away with sub-$100k tax bills. I guess I'm not one of the wealthy people like you. Go figure...

I guess I'm one of the swing voters now but the reason I no longer respect the republican party has been the worst of two evil philosophy. I have come to realize that I would rather have a prez that gets blow-jobs from 19 or 20 year old girls than a prez that lies about being Christan while behind the curtain, killing people to make other people rich and messing with our freedoms to promote it. There has only been increases of terrorism and WMD making all those arguments bogus.

Giving money to Communist china?!!! The corporations, in moving most all their manufacturing to China in the last 8 years have overwhelmed China with money and they don't know how to spend it fast enough! Makes one wonder who is running the whitehouse?

It will be quite interesting to see if the Democrats get to spend >$100M to investigate Bush just like the republicans did to investigate the Clintons. Perhaps those drunken little daughters escapades will come back to light! LOL

wanted to write "other words," I would have written other words.

My advocacy is to elimintate the code test for an FCC
amateur radio operators license.

I have served my country in the US Army. You have NOT.
Yet you have often, sometimes repeatedly "told me what I should have been doing, what my training was, what my duties should have been ("fighting" far from where the actual warfare was actively in progress which would have meant I would have been court martialed for disobeying orders I'd been given).

You have told me all sorts of things about the military yet you were NOT trained by the military. You have NOT served...but you say you "served in other ways." How?
By playing with your radios under a federal license in a HOBBY activity? Do you think that airplane modelers "serve their country" in aeronautical technology by flying their R-C planes in parks?

Do you have any idea how really stupid you sound? You keep on repeating this "dumbing down" mantra like it actually means something.
Newsflash. Ham radio and CB are really only different in the range available. Ham is just CB that goes further and there is nothing you can do to change that.

And, for the 15'th time, the no-code test here in Canada is TOUGHER than the code test.

Please explain what I get handed to me, oh great professor of Canadian studies. Canadian is spelled with a "C" by the way. Don't they educate you down there?

Huh?

Actual -proven- FACT #1 as recently published in the WSJ by the U. S.
Census Bureau:

"The 'Median Family Income' has decreased every year since 2000".

Fact #2: Coincidentally enough, the Republicans have been in power since 2000.

Those are the proven, verifiable FACTS, Jack. What are you basing

Yep, trying to reverse the crap the Democrats bestowed upon us.

The fact that we're trying to recover from the crap the Democrats bestowed upon us.

Nobody is a slow as you are, Carter.

Now go take your meds.

You seem pretty knowledgeable so I need some assistance at understanding something.

What I can't understand is the the incredibly childish attitude of some of the pro-coders here. For me, the confusion stems from having known several old timer hams while growing up. I looked up to them.
They were older gentlemen that had some fascinating knowledge and great stories to tell about their ham radio hobby. This was back in the 60's and early 70's so they are all gone now.

I am sure now that they are spinning in their graves, after the spew
puked up by some of the pro-coders.

Not all of them, to be fair, but a few loud ones stand out.

I still can't figure out how a statement about how CW is just beeps[
as opposed to voice on the same hardware] became transmuted into a requirement that I should hate usenet.
That kind of blatant mis-direction seems to be quite common.

The statement is quite simple...a voice on the airwaves can convey much more information than just the words spoken but CW can only convey the words. Since the medium and usually the hardware is exactly the same weather or not a microphone or a key is used, why bother with a key that is much more limited? Somehow, this relates to pixels on my screen but I have yet to understand why my opponent felt the need to misdirect, misrepresent and misquote. Can none of the pro-coders make a valid point?

Why do some of them feel that insulting my daughter will make their point valid? Are their points so weak that they resort to vulgar insults instead of engaging in debate? I usually don't killfile people but I have made a few exceptions lately.

Now, there will be some spew directed towards my post. They can go ahead and prove that turning ham into CB will most certainly be a great improvement to the ARS. I NEVER knew anybody on CB that was as rude and vulgar as some of the pro-coders here. I can have a nasty mouth too, at times, but it's always in response to stupidity that is obviously not to be taken seriously.

And, ironically, I am the one told to grow up. That's just too funny.

Actually, the Technician License was offered with reduced code requirements for hams who were more interested in technical experimentation than in ragchewing.

What's wrong with it?

There's no requirement to buy the forms in order to use the standard message format. Once someone has handled enough messages, the format becomes second nature.

Using a standard message format for written messages is easier, faster and more accurate. That's why it has been used for so long.

It's not play-acting, Len. It's for-real.

> 2. The monotonic HI HI HI on voice to denote a 'laugh.'

Yep, that's a pretty dumb practice. Note that it's a voice thing.
It's been considered a poor voice operating practice for decades. I simply don't do it.

> Done with little or no inflection and hardly normal

Skilled Morse Code operators know that a lot of meaning can be conveyed by how the code is sent. A skilled Morse Code operator can make "HI HI" in Morse Code sound like a laugh.

Of course you are not a Morse Code operator, Len, so your ignorance may be understandable.

What does that have to do with "formalism"?

> 3. Gratuitous signal level and readability "reports"

I would call them "inaccurate" reports. And again, they're poor operating practice.

What does that have to do with "formalism"?

> 4. Carrying over many, many "Q" code three-letter

I agree!

A few Q signals have a place on voice, where the Q signal saves a lot of verbiage. But most are simply poor operating practice.

For example, some voice operators will say "QSL" to mean "Roger" - which means "I heard and understood everything you said". "QSL" is three syllables, while "Roger" is only two. If both mean the same thing, why say the longer one?

> Jargon use
> has the appearance of being a "professional" service
> but it is just jargon, a juxtaposition of short-hand
> used in different modes.

Jargon does not make something "professional".

Jargon has a use where it conveys a special-purpose meaning in a few words. For example, referring to an amateur band by meters instead of megahertz saves time and space, as in "I was on 80 the other night and the Gs were all over the place".

Most human activities develop their own jargon - amateur radio is no different. The jargon used on the amateur bands is not an attempt to sound "professional".

Once again, the problem you cite is a voice thing.

Another voice-only problem. And what does it have to do with "formalism?"

I think you're jealous, Len, because you don't have an amateur radio callsign.

Referring to a person by their callsign instead of their name is good amateur practice. Callsigns are unique, short, and easily understood, while names often are not.

Amateur radio stations are REAL radio stations, Len. That's not an opinion - it's a legal fact, defined so by the FCC.

Did you ever hear of the "8JK" antenna, Len? Or the "G5RV"?

> 7. The non-radio self-definition of a licensee as being What's wrong with that? It's certainly a fact.

How? The license for both station and operator are federally issued.

btw, I've never heard an amateur using Morse Code use that "federally authorized....." verbiage. Another voice thing.

> 8. The non-acceptance of the word "hobby" for the real

Amateur Radio often performs public service - at the local, state, regional and national level. It's not "just a hobby", Len.

And what does it have to do with "formalism?"

What are you going on about, Len? The word "service" has several meanings.

Nobody says that amateur radio will always save the day. But there are times when amateur radio steps in and provides needed communication when other means have failed.

Like the communications failure in Tennessee a week or so back. I can provide a link, if you need one.

btw, one of the reasons for that problem in Tennessee was that the professionals installed vital telephone equipment in a basement - which flooded.

> 10. The falsity of assuming that amateur radio is > PRIMARILY an "emergency" communications resource.

Who assumes that, Len? And what does it have to do with "formalism?"

Emergency communications is one aspect of amateur radio. It's an important aspect, but not the only one.

> Regardless of the pomposity of many self-righteous

But that's not all it is. Public service is part of amateur radio, too.

Just read Part 97.

amateur radio?

How do you know for sure, Len? CB use does not require a license.

Do you think Amateur Radio should become more like cb, Len?

Do you think your experience in cb somehow makes you qualified to tell experienced radio amateurs how Amateur Radio should be run?

The number is probably closer to one in two Americans, Len. Maybe even more - in many families, there is one or even no wired phone, but everyone in the family has their own cell phone.

However, the cellphone is completely unlike Amateur Radio. The user has very little control over the radio part of a cellphone. S/he can turn the cellphone on and off, and that's about the level of absolute control.

All cell phone radio functions are actually controlled by the cellphone network/system. The user requests various functions, such as intitiating a call, but the system decides how to handle the request - even whether to handle it.

Cell phones are actually just the end device in an enormous communications network - almost all of which does not use radio!

You didn't, Len. You got to push a button on a system that was the result of many people's work - and paid for by the taxpayers.

If someone makes a telephone call that goes through a geosynchronous satellite, they've used microwave communications over a path longer than 50,000 miles.

> Well, now YOU have a quandry. To use that stock "reply"

The taxpayers pay for it, yes. The government subsidizes it, because the market cannot support it.

Nope. The part of your taxes that went to pay for it were tiny. Perhaps one small part was paid for by your taxes - if that much.

> But, if you say I don't then you have to take back your

I never wrote that they "receive a SUBSIDY from the taxpayer.", Len.

You are mistaken, and misquoting.

> "own that equipment" if you take that insult back.

You don't own that equipment, Len. It's that simple.

> YOU don't think your remark was an "insult."

I've asked both you and Brian Burke to explain why the word "subsidize" is an insult. So far, you have not explained.

I even posted the defintion, straight from Webster's. Perhaps you should look it up.

> You've tried

I've said that no insult was intended. You have not explained what the insult is.

As for youth:

I recall you writing that you've always had a problem with that - shall
I produce the exact quote?

I also recall that you wanted to ban anyone under the age of 14 from amateur radio. You went so far as to recommend that to FCC.

As for simplicity:

You sure do seem to make simple things complicated.

> YOU are NOT young, > Face it. You've hit the > halfway mark and are downhill all the way since.
> YOU are MIDDLE-AGED, growing older.

I'm a lot younger than you, Len. In body, mind, and spirit.

> YOU never "pioneered radio" in your life. All you did > was try to fit in to the present...and then rationalized
> by implication that you somehow did some "pioneering."

How do you know for sure, Len?

And what does that have to do with "formalism"?

> You imply that you are "superior" because of achieving
> an amateur extra class license largely through a test
> for morsemanship.

Where do I imply that, Len? I passed the Amateur Extra license exams in 1970, at the age of 16. There were more than a few Extras younger than me, back then.

The written testing for the Extra Class license has always been more than the Morse Code testing. In 1970, earning that license required passing four written tests (Novice, General/Tech, Advanced, Extra) but only two Morse Code tests (13 and 20 wpm).

btw - what exactly is "morsemanship"? You keep using that word, but never say what it means.

Seems to me, Len, that you've taken a simple question and turned you answer into a personal attack on me, for no reason at all. Typical.

The format used helps to ensure accuracy, specifies handling instructions, tells when and from whom the message originated and specifies precedence. Why would Leonard have a problem with that?

It surely is. It may be a telegraphic message, voice message or digital mode message. Did you note Len's use of "REAL" and the smiley used to indicate that he is just joking?

When and if our Leonard ever obtains an amateur radio license, he is works. He is free to reject any report they provide him.

Len is big on terms like "overly-proud" and "over-use". They mean anything more frequent than his standards permit. I may use my callsign at any time.

I have a REAL amateur radio license. It has my REAL callsign printed on
it. I keep it in my REAL radio station.

"Overly-proud", "over-use of callsigns", "elevation of self-importance".

Leonard Anderson doesn't get to specify how much self-importance is too much.

Where in Part 97 of the FCC regs is the word "hobby" ever used?

Have you noticed how far afield Len is going? This isn't about the use of morse or about removing the morse test. It is about amateur radio itself.

Len's use of the term "largely through a test for morsemanship" is a blatant falsehood. As you point out, there were four written exams to be passed in going from the Novice to Amateur Extra. You became an Extra by passing all of the available amateur radio exams. Len bragged, more than a few years ago, that he was going for an "Extra right out of the box". He hasn't yet walked that walk. The talk was cheap.

I'd surely love to see the post from Jim which outlined what you should have been doing in the military or what your training was or what your duties should have been.

Are we to understand that you disobeyed orders and went somewhere near the front to experience that artillery barrage which you recounted in your now classic "sphincter post"? Did you receive any punishment for that? Where and when did that take place? Can your friend Gene confirm it?

I dunno, Len. Do r/c flyers do a lot of public service and emergency work? Are they the original Predator drone guys?

BTW, in regard to your new subject line, no radio amateur can be told what to do by you. You'll be happier if you learn to live with it.

It was not only PRACTICAL, Len, it was the ONLY way known at the time.
I don't think they used "the antenna lead-in", old boy. They probably used the feedline. Think of it as more of a "lead-out". You should get the lead out.

That'd be fine if you hadn't drawn a false picture. You've talked.
You've commented. The FCC must accept your input. They are not bound to agree with you at all.

If you write here, it is the equivalent of your standing on a street corner addressing a crowd. No one in the crowd is required to listen, to approve or to refrain from jeering or shouting you down. The crowd has as much right to speak its mind as you.

The FCC regulates. You do not. If anyone working for the FCC wants to participate in amateur radio, he or she must pass the same exams that any other candidate for an amateur radio license must pass.

You aren't 299 million citizens, Len. You've commented to the FCC, where your input must be accepted. You've commented here where there is nothing forcing anyone to accept, support or agree with your views.
Now what?

You don't own it. You don't regulate it. You don't participate in it.

That's not correct. The 1981 PC had limited capabilities compared to the XT available not too long afterward. Both had limited capabilities in terms of processor speed, memory and storage compared to the PC's of the early 1990's.

There's a big difference between designing or building and using minicomputers. I've never designed or built any minicomputer but I have plenty of experience in using and working as systems manager on Wang VS systems. Now what?

That's odd. Our regional jail uses plenty of PC's. I don't know any nannies but I know plenty of housewives who use PCs. I didn't see anything incorrect in Jim's statement. Where are you going with yours?

I'll bet it took you years to solder the parts on those mother boards.
How long did it take you to assemble that hard drive?

Awwwww! I'll bet you meant that you assembled the motherboard into a case, screwed in the power supply, slid in a drive or two, perhaps added a CD or DVD burner, plugged in a couple of PCI boards, attached the monitor, keyboard and mouse and called it a day.

> You are not a member of the IEEE, a Professional Association.

The city of Glen Dale does indeed have a lock up. You've been there.

A private auction doesn't limit who can bid on the item, it just hides the user ids of the people who are bidding on it. I bought an Icom PCR-100 from him a while ago, and while I am quite happy with it I noticed he had a few more for sale that where owned by the same guy with a 486 who was selling it because he didn't know how to use it. However, there was an issue that came up in the sale and he handled it very well.

It doesn't require a doctor to see that someone is not in command of his faculties, Roger. I've seen your postings for a number of years. Sane people don't write the kinds of things you write. You're clearly disturbed and you need medical intervention. You should seek professional help before a decision is made to put you away involuntarily. You could be seen as a danger to yourself or others.
If you check yourself in, you can check yourself out. If the decision is made by state authorities, you'd have no say.

It isn't. There are conventions here that facilitate communication on the Internet. Called the Netiquette. Email addresses in "From:" headers can change for legitimate reasons.

That group does not run the Usenet. Duh. And neither to ignorant and arrogant punks like you.

I like to know that I'm dealing with a person with at least a little integrity. One that will allow me to check out their posting history. Someone who isn't pretending to be more than one person. Most of us do.

You should go to:

http://groups.google.com/advanced_group_search

And try different aliases in the Author box until you find a good one that returns zero hits. Don't include the email address part. Then stick with it.

You've just admitted that this is a sockpuppet created for that radio group.

<snicker>

>>Alan
> http://kb9rqz.blogspot.com/

Not interested. Blogs are stupid. Created by trolls. Everyone can edit what they've posted in the past so nothing on a blog is worth schitt.

You are a stinking troll and I would never believe a word you post. On the Usenet or the Web. I don't believe anything you've posted here. You have zero credibility.

Just run along and hide from people who aren't even looking for you and couldn't hurt you even if they located you.

Trolls aren't capable of doing anything but sitting on their fat butts and running their big mouths.

While they hide their posting histories by switching aliases and newsservers all the time. And that's _all_ that does. It doesn't keep anyone with any power from tracking you down in short order. Anyone with a few thousand dollars to hire a large personal investigation firm could have your name and address and a lot more in a week. And no one who doesn't have a few thousand dollars could possibly be a threat to you.

And you sure are making it easier with that call sign in your email address.

<snicker>

... _._

Fix your "From:" header or get the hell out of my newsreader.

And spare us the rest of your kindergarden sockpuppets.

Alan

There are some smart ones out there. After all, why is it that the wages have decreased while the cost of living has skyrocketed over the past 5 years. Housing skyrocketed while family incomes decreased. That is not a healthy economic picture at all.

Weren't the Republicans the saviors of the United States in this last election? After all they were the party of God or at least they and many of their hypocritical two faced supporters said so. I guess it makes it the truth if your so called values guys say it is true. What a joke.

I've never claimed to be an expert, Len. I do know some things that you do not know. That seems to really bother you.
> who tells everyone else what to write correctly and > not correctly, what to like and not like.

I point out some of your mistakes. That's how things go in a newsgroup.

You can have any opinion you want, Len. You can believe the earth is flat, the moon made of green cheese, that "acceptable" has the letter
"i" in it, or that the IBM PC was introduced in 1980. If you express such "opinions", it's possible someone else will point out your mistakes. Your opinion does not make something a fact.

> You know everything, yes?

Oh no, I don't know nearly everything. But I do know some things that you do not know. That seems to really bother you.

In the context of the PC, about the past 7 years.

Of course. But until about 7 years ago, most complete systems were well over $1000.

That's relatively recently, Len.

Did it include a monitor? Printer? Supplies for the printer?

That's my point, Len. The prices now are far below what they were even 8 years ago.

Ever hear of something called "inflation", Len? How about "inflation adjusted"?

You know, how the value of money declines in an inflationary economy?

"2006 dollars" is a valid way of describing that.

No, by any reasonable standard. Heck, the original IBM PC was considered obsolete long before 1990.

And by the late 1990s they had been eclipsed by much more powerful PCs.

The point is that those early machines were expensive and limited in their capabilities.

The original 1981 IBM PC did not include a hard drive, color display, network interface, modem or mouse as standard equipment. The software available for it was limited and expensive.

It's not about me, Len. It's about what computers used to cost, and what they could do.

> Why not? Can't you build a functional IBM
> PC clone for just $100 in parts?

Actually, Len, I'm quite good at assembling PCs. For a lot less than $100. In many cases, for no money at all.

My specialty is collecting older machines and utilizing the best parts from them to assemble a "new" one. Usually I get them before they reach the dumpster, but sometimes I have to reach in and pick something out.

It's amazing what computer hardware individuals and businesses throw away these days. 17" monitors that work perfectly. Pentium II class machines complete with CD burners, NICs, modems, etc. Sometimes the OS is still on the hard drive. Cables, keyboards, printers, and more. It is not at all unusual for me to find working but discarded computers that cost more than $2500 new.

> Do you think you need > morse code skills to program computer code?

Who needs to "program computer code", Len? Why do you live in the past?

> I know a few folks who have built whole new PC-compatible

But you haven't done it. I have.

It's also besides the point: Until rather recently (7 years ago, approximately), PCs were quite expensive. Spending a couple of thousand dollars is a different thing than spending a couple of hundred.

> >"The internet" was originally rather limited and not simple to access

Not the point. What is the point is that there is much more content available. And it's much easier and less expensive to access.

> Define "technically minded." Did PC users need university > degrees to access the world wide web? I don't think so.

They did need some understanding of how to set up and use a PC. That sort of thing used to be fairly unusual - not anymore.

Sure they do, Len.

tests and you haven't earned the license.

I don't claim to be.

Because you got the facts wrong, Len.

> Why do you think YOUR "computer history" is > "more accurate" than mine?

Because it is, Len. You got the dates wrong. You left out how much PCs used to cost, and how little they used to be able to do.

If PCs have had an effect on the number of US radio amateurs, most of that effect has happened in the past 8 years or less.

> Have you built ANY personal > computer from scratch?

I've assembled several from components.

Yes.

That's nice. Were they IBM-compatible PCs? Or were they simple systems from 25-30 years ago?, and you're playing word games with "personal" and "computer"

> Two of them, in > fact. It was fun to do so for me.

That's nice, Len.

> Why are you trying > to tell me what I "should" be having fun with?

I'm not - if you want to build computers, go ahead.

But if you want to discuss the effects of PCs on amateur radio, you're going to see rebuttals to your mistaken assertions.

Morse Code can convey more than the words - if the operators are skilled in it.

It's not the same thing as a voice, though. It's a different communications experience, just as the written word is a different experience from the spoken word.

> Since the medium and usually the hardware is exactly > the same weather or not a microphone or a key is used, why bother with Several reasons:

1) It's often not the same hardware. You can use much simpler equipment for Morse Code than for voice modes.

2) It's a different communications experience. (see above). For many of us, that alone makes it worthwhile.

3) It takes up much less spectrum. With good equipment, five to ten Morse Code signals can fit in the same spectrum space required by just one single-sideband voice signal. AM and FM take up even more space on the band.

4) It's more effective under adverse conditions. A Morse Code signal typically has about 10-13 dB of advanatage over single-sideband voice.
That's about 2 S-units. Under conditions that make SSB unusable, or barely usable, Morse Code will often be solid copy with good signals.

There are other reasons, but those four come to mind right now.

> Somehow, this relates to pixels on my

Lots of that going around - on both sides. Don't let it bother you - I sure don't.

> Can none of the pro-coders make
> a valid point?

I just made a couple of valid points. That doesn't mean there must be a Morse Code test, just that the mode has some good points.

And you don't find the real life example it's based on offensive?

If you had more than two functioning brain cells, you would realize that his post was an allegory for the bogus Iraq "war" and that the Halliburton scandals and the piling up of dead bodies, theirs and ours, is indeed offensive.

One of those old timers once told me that he recognized another

Well, I did say "usually". But wouldn't simpler equipment limit you to

I could see the challenge in this. I remember a certain thrill back when I was a kid, whenever I managed to make out a distant signal and recognize where it was broadcast from.

I just don't like the snotty attitude that makes the ARS look so bad.

I am still waiting for my government handout. Never had any government handouts in the 44 years I have been around.

Thank you for making some points in a nice, civilized manner.

My neighbor, when I was about 12 or younger, had a nifty tower setup.
He had 2 tall telephone poles in the ground with enough space between them for a third pole bolted in near the top, adding almost the full length of another pole, save for about 6 feet where all three were bolted together. I was self-supporting.

No, But I hear you jamming and making unidentified transmissions there.
BTW, clueless, the FCC can require any ham tested under the VE system to retest. They don't have to give a reason. In Roger's case, it sure backfired because he passed them and even upgraded. It's not much of a "sanction," is it?

You must be talking about Dave Assheil's mommy, she lives near there!
But then your mommy lives in a crackhouse, eh, Billy?

No, it requires somebody with intelligence, something a flunky ex State Dept gopher like you doesn't have. That's why they gave you the crappy locations nobody wants. To quote Homer Simpson....."Facts are useless, they can be used to prove anything."

Slant economic numbers to your party line, it's easy as pie. If you are right wing, just quote productivity numbers. If you are on the left, use the middle class figures and remind people of how war economies are usually bolstered.

Reality is that we have had good economic Presidents from both sides of this eternal conflict, and heinous ones from both sides as well. Our current Dictator (you actually have to win an election to be President, Bush didn't win without cheating, hence his Dictator status via Coup d'Etat) wouldn't fall in either catagory. His economic policies are bad, but not heinous.

Who cares anyway, when the Comet hits later this month (as posted in another thread) national economic policy will be fucked anyway.

I dont doubt that CBers do a thousand times as much public sevice as hams do but it is not the kind of thing that gets news attention. I know when an ice storm hit here it was Cbers that helped my wife. She is a ham but couldnt access the repeater because there were a bunch of hams on there talking about how much ice they got at there house. This sort of thing goes on all the time. Its true that hams are set up better to provide emergency communications but a Cber is more likely to stop and change a tire for you when you cant.

I was looking at the Glen Dale Police web page to see what, if anything, they had to say about their jail facilities. I also was hoping that they might have "Roger Wiseman Slept Here" souvenirs for sale, or something else equally interesting. Apparently, Woger isn't important enough to warrant that kind of attention.

While browsing the city's web pages, I noticed acknowledgements which said:

"Web page hosted by Ohio Valley Internet Service, 1816 7th Street, Moundsville, WV 26041"

For some reason, Woger isn't welcome at Ovis any longer.

Woger once had an account with Ovis, but the President of Ovis (Pam Hoffer) had him kicked off. Could it have been because Woger posted things like this?

"And that fat hog Pam shouldn't caterwaul with her hunchbacked fatass mommy with the Xtian band anymore, she caused more stray dogs to come around that run-down shack that Ovis is housed in. Another Xtian hypocrite, that radio station is a known haven for child abuse in the mound town. She is a fucking idiot." -- ab8mq in message <akd8bpkce8@pita.alt.net>

And this?

"Wrong again, FATASS, I told Pammy to go fuck herself after she called here, all upset. I guyess it was because she was behind giving the black system admin she has a blowjob in the server room and giving one to her dog." -- AB8MQ in message-id <737589ee.0405220528.371d3f66@posting.google.com>

Or was Woger's ejection from Ovis like his FCC retest and just another random event in his life that had no connection to anything else that he did?

>You seem pretty knowledgeable so I need some assistance at >understanding something.

Jim, that statement is bound to ignite more flame war stuff in here, heh heh heh heh heh...

>What I can't understand is the the incredibly childish attitude of >some of the pro-coders here.

Part of that is the Nature of the Beast, the computermodem mode of communications. The 'Beast' got 'steroids' with the ability to send 'anonymous' messages (they think...traceability is possible but only through systems administrators' access to the 'Net). When that happened the early male adolescent behavior surfaced with all its immaturity.

Having participated in computer-modem communications locally and networked since December 1984, I've seen quite a bit of that. It is clinically, also morbidly fascinating to me. Since most of my early experiences were on local BBSs there was the opportunity to meet socially with those participants, get real clues to the person instead of just seeing their words on a screen. In most their words echoed their up-close personnae. In perhaps a quarter of them their fantasies and imaginations ruled their screen words, their public, social interaction being nowhere near that and they were relatively subdued, few having 'remarkable' lives. It could be said that their computer-modem personnae represented their imaginations given a pseudo-life, something to fantasize about to relieve their everyday lives' frustrations.

With the ability to be anonymous (through some 'Net servers) those imaginations and frustrations can be let out full force. The 'anonymous' ones become aggressive, 'in-your-face' types, no longer mindful of normal social, in-person behavior rules. This is aided by the relative isolation of time and distance of messaging. The aggressive ones need have no fear of physical confrontation as a result of their words, they can act 'tough' or abusive or insulting in safety. Ergo, many found emotional 'relief' in the filthy venting we've all seen in just this newsgroup.

It's a not-nice condition in some humans to have their (usually suppressed) anger, frustration, bigotry so close to the surface but it does exist in them. It can turn to rage and action in rare cases, thus the stories of violence that show up in the news. Humans aren't perfect by a long shot.
Civilization requires a greater suppression of that internal rage, anger, frustration for the common good but some think internally that they are 'better' than the common folk. Hence we get the overtones of 'superiority' through sub-groups in which their capabilities are exaggerated in those groups' self-righteous descriptions of themselves.

That isn't confined to amateur radio. It exists all along the human experience.

>For me, the confusion stems from having >known several old timer hams while growing up. I looked up to them.

Understandable from the viewpoint of younger people. I think we've all had such experiences...mine were scarce in regards to amateur radio in my hometown but there were lots with other life experiences that were fun to listen to and to respect.

>They were older gentlemen that had some fascinating knowledge and >great stories to tell about their ham radio hobby. This was back in >the 60's and early 70's so they are all gone now.

Being of a younger age, my growing-up days 'old timers' were rather focussed on the experience of World War II. "Radio" per se was seldom mentioned as a part of that.

What is most interesting (to me) is finding out later that some of them were exaggerating what they said and a few were downright liars! :-)

If one survives long enough to become the same age as those 'old timers' (in a relative chronological way that is), it is easier to see where they are coming from! Much easier...! :-)

>I am sure now that they are spinning in their graves, after the spew
>puked up by some of the pro-coders.

Well, if the afterlife allows such observation of mortals, I'm of the opinion that those old 'old-timers'

are having a good time and laughing at the mortals' shenanigans!

>Not all of them, to be fair, but a few loud ones stand out.

The loud ones stand out because they MUST stand out and make everyone pay attention to them. Their EGO demands it. They want to RULE, to control, to judge, to be in-charge. In here those are confined to the pro-coders or who USE their tested morsemanship (however long ago that happened, if it ever did) to show "how good" they are.

>I still can't figure out how a statement about how CW is just beeps[
>as opposed to voice on the same hardware] became transmuted into a >requirement that I should hate usenet.

Not surprising to me. Those fixated on their alleged superiority dispense with logic, go emotional, and become one with the rabble, the filth-spewers. They are NOT interested in anything but making themselves look good to themselves on their own screens. They have little recognition that the same 'message' they sent is read by anyone else but the recipient...when it may be read by thousands of others who never reply.

>That kind of blatant mis-direction seems to be quite common.

I agree. Such misdirection is common on just about every newsgroup, has precedence in the BBSs, even on the old ARPANET just before it morphed into USENET.
Lacking the validity of anything but their own experiences, they toss logic out the window and consentrate on 'conquering' the message thread.

>The statement is quite simple...a voice on the airwaves can convey >much more information than just the words spoken but CW can only >convey the words.

You know that, I know that, and hundreds of thousands of other humans know that. That's the reason that all other radio services except amateur radio have dispensed with on-off keying radiotelegraphy for communications purposes. At least in the USA; I don't have enough information about Canada's use of communications modes to verify that.

>Since the medium and usually the hardware is exactly >the same weather or not a microphone or a key is used, why bother with >a key that is much more limited?

Logic in such an argument is NOT desired by pro-coders.
They are fixated on the medium, not the message. They got their rank-status-privileges mainly through their morsemanship and their egos demand that Their desires should be those of all.

Part of that fixation on radiotelegraphy in the USA is a result of the tremendous amount of ham-oriented publications of the ARRL. The ARRL emphasizes radio-telegraphy as the ne-plus-ultra of amateur radio skills. Since the ARRL has a virtual monopoly on amateur radio publications here, has had that for at least seven decades, they can and have managed to condition the thinking of American amateur radio licensees in favor of radiotelegraphy.

Those who've been conditioned will not understand that they've been imprinted but insist it like some 'natural order of things.' Further, they tend to out-rage and the very idea that they've been brainwashed! Such outrage takes on a religious fervor at times.

>Somehow, this relates to pixels on my >screen but I have yet to understand why my opponent felt the need to >misdirect, misrepresent and misquote. Can none of the pro-coders make >a valid point?

Few can. In here I'd say that NONE can.

Your 'opponent' wasn't trying to argue logically. Klein was obviously using emotion as an 'argument,' frustrated at not being able to 'triumph' in a message exchange.

>Why do some of them feel that insulting my daughter will make their >point valid?

It is an emotional ATTACK ploy. It is common in nearly all newsgroups. Those that do these sort of things can get away with it, unworried about any direct physical confrontation that might ensue.

>Are their points so weak that they resort to vulgar >insults instead of engaging in debate?

Yes.

>Now, there will be some spew directed towards my post.

Of course...and to this reply. One can 'take that to the bank.' :-)

>They can go >ahead and prove that turning ham into CB will most certainly be a >great improvement to the ARS.

Well, the expressed bigotry against CB by hams is a very old thing going back to 1958 when the FCC created "Class C and D" CB service on an 11 meter frequency band de-allocated from amateur radio use down here. Having to work both with and for some old-time hams, I heard mostly howls of outrage and indignation that the FCC 'dared' to take away 'their' band and 'give' it to 'civilians.' Worse yet, NO TEST, not the slightest requirement to demonstrate morsemanship in order to use an HF band! :-)

> I NEVER knew anybody on CB that was as >rude and vulgar as some of the pro-coders here.

I have to agree with you. The vast majority of CB use down here is on highways, mostly by truckers but a large number of RV-driving vacationers are there, too. At worst, some trucker might go into a long tale of something (that only a few consider funny) but I have yet to hear outright personal insults on CB. I quit using CB mobile in late 1999 after selling my '82 Camaro but a twice-a-year fire-up of CB at home doesn't indicate anything different; this residence in southern California is only a half mile from our Interstate 5, a major highway north-south near the Pacific coast. Our cell phone now works so well on major highways that we don't have any consideration of installing any other radio in our present car.

>And, ironically, I am the one told to grow up. That's just too >funny.

Well, that's how it goes. :-) Expect more of that kind of comment. I dare say it will occur under 'moderation' as well.

When a pro-coder says "grow up," they really mean "think like I think, appreciate only what I like, etc." They use that little throw-away line in lieu of a personal insult, a button-pushing phrase to get their 'opponent' angry. Sometimes it works, but most of the time it is just their stupid way of attempting retaliation.

He Can't.

Mark Morgan, KB9RQZ, or Markie, is a retard. He can't even do the internet and use a spell checker at the same time. Last month he won the Golden Killfile award. His best friend and part time live-in lover is AB8MQ, Woger Wiseman. When Roger is out of jail he stays with Mark

Yes, Some people are lazy and as long as there is a CW requirement they won't go for a ham license, or upgrade beyond tech. They don't really want to be hams enough to put out an effort to be one, but the ones that go for the CW and written exams really want to be hams, and will stick with the service and will be an important part of keeping it going.

You don't get $100 Mark, but if you're nice and a good boy, maybe you can sweet talk Lloyd, Roger, or Steve into giving you a Beer enema. Steve knows medical things and can administer an enema. Lloyd or Roger could give you an enema too. They're good at sticking things in another man's butt.

Do you have a spare tire in your car in case you get a flat tire? Ham radio without a CW requirement is like driving your car around without a spare tire. Why do you people want to dumb everything down all the time.

Eliminating CW is a loss in the number of ways we can communicate.

Yup. Little things about an op's sending can make it as recognizable as a familiar voice.

btw, the term "fist" is used in the same context as "hand" was used by that op.

> I am not sure how > much more a person can get out of code.

The words, of course. How they are sent can tell a lot, too. It takes a bit of experience to recognize all the subtleties of Morse Code.

The main point is that skilled Morse Code operators can convey more than 'just the words'.

Of course.

That depends on the exact situation. The important point is that once you have Morse Code skills, using code-only equipment isn't really a limitation in most cases.

Simplicity of equipment can be very important in some situations. For example, if someone wants to actually build their HF Amateur Radio equipment, it's much simpler and easier to build a Morse Code station than an equivalent-performance voice station. In portable operations, the power requirement, size and weight of a Morse Code station can be less than that of the equivalent voice station.

> >2) It's a different communications experience. (see above). For many of

All sorts of things:

A) You can communicate without talking or typing. (In a world where a lot of us spend a lot of time on the telephone and computer, being able to communicate another way can be a real treat!)

B) The exercise of a skill is fun. Consider the person who learns how to play a musical instrument: do you think making music (performing) is the same experience as listening to recorded music?

C) Once you have the skills, communicating with Morse Code can be as easy - or even easier - than using voice.

D) You can use Morse Code in situations where voice could not be used.
For example, suppose you are in a small house, apartment, RV, tent, etc., and you want to operate without disturbing others (who might be sleeping, talking, etc.). Of course you can put on headphones so they don't hear the received signals, but in order to transmit, you have to talk. Even if you keep your voice down, it can bother others. How many times have you heard people complain about folks using cell phones in public? But with Morse Code and a good pair of cans, you can operate and make less noise than someone typing on a keyboard.

None of which mean that there must be a Morse Code test for an amateur radio license. I happen to think such a test is a good idea, but that's just my opinion.

Exactly! The very fact that it takes some skill is part of the fun and attraction.
>
> >There are other reasons, but those four come to mind right now.

Here's one more:

5) The amount of "bad behavior" problems resulting in FCC enforcement actions is much less from radio amateurs using Morse Code. Just look at the FCC enforcement letters that address violations of deliberate interference, obscenity, exceeding license privileges, and other "bad behavior" problems. Almost all of them are for violations committed using voice modes, not Morse Code. The difference is much greater than would be expected from the relative popularity of the modes.

This doesn't mean all voice ops are problems or all Morse Code ops are saints! All it means is that there's a lot less enforcement problems from hams actually using Morse Code.

Agreed! There's too much of that type of attitude on both sides of the debate.

> I am still waiting for my government handout. Never had any government > handouts in the 44 years I have been around.

How does one define "handout"?

For example, is public education of children a government handout? Yes, many parents with kids in public school pay school taxes, but in most districts those taxes paid by parents do not cover all of the costs of the public schools. And the level of taxation does not depend on how many children the parents have in school. Is public school a government handout to people with lots of kids?

Or how about tax deductions? Are they a form of government handout? If you have a mortgage or home equity loan, the interest is deductible. If you rent, you don't get that deduction. Is that a government handout to homeowners?

Not trying to be argumentative, just trying to get a clear idea of what is a handout and what isn't.

Cool! I recently saw a similar setup used for a repeater antenna in a wooded area. It blended in much better than metal tower.

The question of whether there should be a Morse Code test for an amateur radio license really boils down to this: Does such a test do more good than harm? The answer is always an opinion, not a fact.

Here's a photo of Anne Hoffer (remember Pam Hoffer?) hugging some skinny, short-haired guy who is beating Woger's time. From the info on the web site, the guy is a pizza delivery man. The ladies always go for the bad boy, pizza delivery types, and that always enrages Woger, because all he can get are the dregs.

http://www.wrkp.com/images/ovis/ovis2.jpg

Too bad Woger alienated Pam Hoffer of Ovis. Otherwise, he could have been the guy in that photo instead. That's the story of Woger's life: He's always on the outside looking in.

"elimintate"?

You advocate a lot more than changes to Morse Code testing, Len.

Not at all. But I've spent a lot more time taking Amateur Radio license tests than you have.

> If so, what have you done to require taking tests all the time?

It comes down to this, Len:

I think that further reductions in the license test requirements for an Amateur Radio license are not a good idea. That includes reductions in either code or written testing.

That's all there is to it.

> If morse code radiotelegraphy is so wonderful, great, noble,
> "saves lives [not really]," traditional-that-all-MUST-take

I think that having Morse Code skill at a basic level is part of the skills that all radio amateurs should have.

What are you talking about, Len? You sound very confused.

> Are you upset that OTHERS who come later will not do as you > did?

Others cannot do as I did, Len.

> Why is what you HAD to do required of all OTHERS?

What I did is not required of "all OTHERS", Len.

I think that further reductions in the license test requirements for an Amateur Radio license are not a good idea. That includes reductions in either code or written testing.

In the past 25 years, the requirements for an FCC amateur radio license have been gradually but steadily reduced. At each reduction, those pushing for the reduction said the reductions were needed to insure growth, to attract more technically-oriented people, and much more.

But the growth in numbers in the 1990s was less than in the 1980s. There's been a net loss since 2000. The reductions have not attracted more technically-oriented people. Etc.

> What is wrong with live and let live?

You're allowed to live, Len.

That doesn't mean there are no standards.

I know the comment about people leaving Amateur radio isn't Barrys comment, but thought I'd address it anyway. I was 69 when I got my Tech license and 72 by the time I made myself pass the code test and got my General. A lot of the avid pro-morse Hams are even older than I am. I know of no one locally who has just quit the hobby and those senior to me are not leaving on their own at all, when they do stop Hammin' it's 'cause their keys went silent. I never used code after passing the test. I've got the thought in the back of my mind that I may sometime pursue a little CW, but it all depends on when I get my own SK notice.

Hmm. OK, how about talking to a no-code with a yet-to-be-activated General? I sat for & took the Tech, passed and they mentioned I could take the General. Great. Passed that one as well. Working on Morse now.

Missed the Extra, though, by a few questions.

Was my first shot at any exam.

Neither a Tech nor a General makes one a Ham, though.
Nor Morse.

That only qualifies you to be a good student of the avocation.
I don't expect to be really good at ham radio until I've played around with a transceiver for a year or two, maybe. Still need to learn the lingo, learn electronics, get my feet wet, build a receiver and maybe a transmitter, blow up a few caps..you know, OJT. Plus lots of hamfests where I'll be looking for a cute hamette.

When I finally DO get a rig of some kind, I sorta kinda might be Ready for going after QSOs.

Even from folks who think I've got an honorary degree.

at this point, his identity doesn't matter. he's just another bunch fo electrons in the ether (particularly stupid electrons that is).

face it, he can't construct an intelligent conversation AND he has to resort to insults against a DISABLED person... what does that say about his character? would any respectable employer even hire him?
does he even speak to his MOTHER with that mouth (I bet it got washed out a lot with lye soap when he was a kid!)?

Those and many more questions we need answers to......

Liar. You don't even have the beginner's training wheel no code tech license. You couldn't pass any of the tests or the code. The FCC can retest anybody under the VE system. what part of that can't you understand, stupid? The FCC has the authority, pursuant to §97.519(d)(2) of the rules to readminister any examination element previously administered by a volunteer examiner.

: Dumbfuck, the Marshall County ARES doesn't have a webpage, try again,

Then what is at http://www.geocities.com/skywarncanwarn/ doodle brain?
It sure looks like the Marshall County ARES, and it even has a place to send email.

"Fuckup Shemale Lee" <S...@houston-hunks.com> whined like a fucking spoiled little girl (which he is) in <3brnq721213nsld2n...@houston-hunks.com>:
" I dare you to..."

Fuckup Lee will have his hypocrisy pointed out to him again the next time he posts my quotes in <aimrjv$l8...@pita.alt.net>:
"Didn't I say that your quoting of message IDs is pointless?"

Faggot Lee posts the following slobber, not realizing his own whining and netKKKoping past in <3C8BA6A5.19219...@houston-hunks.com>:
"You don't like it? I suggest that you use your OE news filters, or simply skip the thread. No one is forcing you to read it, and you sure as hell aren't going to get any of the participants to stop."

Faggot Lee admits he and the other anonymous cowards being owned by AB8MQ in <3C93E88F.932B5...@houston-hunks.com>:
"Wiseman (who, by the way, "owns" us)"

Faggot Lee <S...@houston-hunks.com> confirms his SPANKARD status with the following whine but the BITCH still follows up like a good puppy dog in <a9c75d$go...@dosa.alt.net >:
"Basically, Wiseman bores me now, and I won't waste time on his replies [blah blah blah]"

AIDS INFECTED BABY RAPER "Fuckup Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> proud of his illiteracy states the obvious in message <986143249...@huffs-on-houston-dicks.com>:
"I normally don't read"

Faggot Stagger Lee confesses he and his family get this way when the prospect of licking testicles (something he doesn't have) is made available in < 12417$Y17.5...@houston-hunks.com>:
"We are overjoyed."

Fuckwit Lee finally admits his SPANK at AB8MQ's hands yet another time in 3C4AE592.6A0CD...@houston-hunks.com:
"[Any followups by Wiseman will be ignored.]"

Fuckup Lee, who fails to "grasp" the concept that "slander" is spoken and "libel" is written, would be better served if he just stuck to grasping nutsacks, incoherently babbled
in <3C4AE592.6A0CD...@houston-hunks.com>:

"COTSE seemed to have the laughable notion that what Wiseman was doing was exercising freedom of speech. Slander is of course not protected speech in the US, but the concept that even free speech has its limits seemed to be impossible for Steve Gielda -- COTSE's owner -- to grasp."

Chickenshit COWARD Faggot Lee pathetically tries to justify his hiding behind anonymity in <3B8FFFF5.143FA...@houston-hunks.com>:

"...readers have already had uninvited people show up at their homes, have had people subscribe them to magazines and book clubs, have received hang-up calls in the middle of the night, have had poison pen letters written to their neighbors and employers, and have had poison pen email sent to their ISPs in an attempt to get their accounts canceled. That's not a "what if" scenario either: It has happened repeatedly to certain members of these news groups, yours truly included (one person has emailed repeated lies to Altopia in an attempt to learn my identity). One of our readers has even had to go to the courts and obtain an injunction against one of those nuts.

I choose not to give insane people like that any kind of edge in physically locating me, and if you think that's "cowardice", you are only demonstrating your profound ignorance of Usenet and of the kind of people who read these posts."

Then the no-balls coward ends his feminine cuntly whining with:
"And do you know what else? I AM SICK TO DEATH OF THOSE WHO REPEAT
YOUR TIRED OLD, IGNORANT REFRAIN. Until you learn a few things, you ought to shut your arrogant mouth."

Staggering Drunk Lee, the "Pulitzer prize award-winning writer"
slobbered the following Ebonics in <9a56ue$hi...@dosa.alt.net>:
"I hope yourself takes the advice you are giving to yourself."

SPANKARD Faggot Lee admits he's cross posted in order to help his pathetic, syphilitic ass win a flame war, if you can read his chicken scratching
EBONICS in <3AA5A686.E2ACE...@some.net>:

"I have seen to it that some of JBO's irrational posts show up in alt.2600, because the owner of cotse practically lives there (tell you something?), and I wanted the owner of cotse to ?>xperience JBO's posts first hand. Cotse is doing a service to no one when t confuses freedom with license -- the typical error of the neophyte do->ooder -- and Roger's posts are a prime example of the typical esults that error."

Child abuser and FUCKUP Shemale Lee (SLee@houston-hunks.com) whined to the newsgroups as usual and admitted his defeat with a SPANKING by plonk
and his repressed wish to suck sperm by projecting it onto others in <kc8jbo.sucks.sperm@houston-hunks.com>:
"You know what? I think I'm going to add cotse and mailandnews.com to my filtering rules. I'm bored with you, Mr. Scatologist....<plonk>"

SLee@houston-hunks.com (Stagger Lee) confessed to his SPANKARD status in <nuking.waldo@houston-hunks.com>:
"Waldo has the honor of being the first poster in this news group that I've ever killfiled. To make sure he stays killed, all posts and all followups to posts from mailusenet.com will be nuked before I ever see them."

Fuckwit SLee@houston-hunks.com (Stagger Lee) supports illegal computer activities and terrorism in MsgId: <pimple.on.my.ass@houston-hunks.com>:
"But I am delighted that cotse was hacked and DOSed to the point that it can't operate this weekend."

STUPID ASS "Stagger "king of wishful thinking" Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> blathered out of his well-reamed ass his hope to regain some face in message <0428120427.2...@houston-hunks.com>:
"One guess has it that KC8JBO lost his ability to post through cotse"

"Stagger Pee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> whined like a little girl in message in <04630.10999.00@houston-hunks.com>:

"Whatever piece of crap newsreader you're using, it just violated an RFC by putting whitespace in the Newsgroups header.

Stagger Pee has too much sperm in his eyes to know that a "_" is a character, not a space.

"As a reslult, many news servers are either going to chop off the second newsgroup that you added or else reject your post entirely."

Stagger Pee knows more about KFC than RFC, and as a "result" spittles out of his lardass. It would seem that something else was "chopped off" in Stagger Pee's case, but there wasn't much to lose.

AIDS INFECTED IGNORAMUS "Stagger Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> demonstrated his lack of education and tried to backpedal out of his use of "too" instead of "two" in message <too.two_or_a.to@houston-hunks.com>:
"You too need to get a newsreader which generates a References header."

Fuckhead Lee slobbered his pathetic gene cesspool story in MsgId: <get.on.the....@houston-hunks.com>

"Since a couple of you are simply dying to know my true identity, let me give you a few tantalizing hints to see what you can do with them. I'm going to tell you about my father (I used to call him "Dad" when we were alone).

Daddy was a basketball star at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Indiana. He lettered during all of his seven years as an undergraduate,

but then lost his eligibility when he took time out to write a thesis on the quantum electrodynamics of degenerate stellar atmospheres.

Unfortunately, the use of the word "degenerate" in his thesis nearly got him kicked out of Notre Dame. He straightened the situation out, and managed to graduate "semper ubi sub ubi" with the class of 1940, and immediately left for his favorite Chicago suburb -- Calumet City -- to start his life as a brand-new astrophysicist.

It was then that he got drafted into the army, so he put his ambitions aside and served his country as one of the most accomplished martial artists of the WWII era.

He had learned martial arts as a boy member of the Mafia in Chicago, and he single-handedly invaded several Japanese islands during WWII.
Mayor
Daily awarded him with the keys to the brothels of Chicago when he returned from the Pacific theatre, and that's how he met my mother.

Oh my. I may have given too much away: By now, you probably know precisely who I am."

Fuckup Shemale Lee fucks up again in <3D39C465.63A9C...@houston-hunks.com>:
"I wonder how long it will take Ohio Valley Internet Services to boot your ass?"

Fuckup Lee whines about crossposting and redirecting followups with "The original post is spam, as can be seen by looking at the number of people who have already been tricked into responding in alt.bad.clams."

yet the hypocrite admits he did the same thing himself in <3D487543.91D08...@houston-hunks.com>:
"I've tricked you into posting your spew elsewhere, yes"

==========
Anonymous coward and all-around fuckwit "Stagger Lee" <S...@houston-hunks.com> revealed what a hypocrite he is and ironically admits he has no credibility by his own definition in message <3C36FDCC.76EC1...@houston-hunks.com> :

"Therefore, I find your story difficult to believe. Your own anonymous status makes the story even less credible."

Fuckup Shemale Lee fucks up again in <3D39C465.63A9C...@houston-hunks.com>:
"I wonder how long it will take Ohio Valley Internet Services to boot

"FUCKUP Lee" <SLee@houston-hunks.com> geography idiot and imbecile fucks up
as usual when he thinks Marshall County, Alabama and Marshall County, West Virginia are the same place in message <afvsc2$6a...@pita.alt.net>:
" Then what is at http://www.geocities.com/skywarncanwarn/ doodle brain?
It sure looks like the Marshall County ARES, and it even has a place to send email."

Fuckup Lee, unaware of the IRONY of his question, still fails to answer whether or not he found the Marshall County WV ARES site which he said was http://www.geocities.com/skywarncanwarn/, a Marshall County, AL ARES website
in <3D4708C2.DD7E8...@houston-hunks.com>:
"Are you ever going to answer those questions, or are you going to keep on running?"

Stupid Lee (Stagger Lee@ houston-hunks.com) provides yet anothre

I almost didn't see your post, because my standard filters remove all posts which contain 500 or more lines. Quite by accident, I found the post while using a news server that I only rarely use. Here's the only response you'll get, CW Man.

: BACKPEDAL BOY SLee@houston-hunks.com (Stagger Lee) talks tough, yet
: fails to deliver
: (I'm still waiting to lose my ISP) in
: <pants.down.wiseman@houston-hunks.com>:
: "Ready to lose that ISP too, mensa-boy, after trying to hide it for a : year?
: Mess with me in real life, and you will always pay a price."

This is a typical rant which is totally in error. It turns out that Woger was quoting a post which is still in Google's archives, and that's the reason I chose it as an example. Everyone can verify it by using Google Groups advanced search for a specific message ID. The original post reads as follows:

--(begin quote)-- Newsgroups: rec.radio.amateur.misc
Subject: Wiseman -- pants down -- outs himself from StratusWave.net
Date: 8 Oct 2003 23:43:22 GMT
Organization: Houston's least reliable ISP Message-ID: <pants.down.wiseman@houston-hunks.com>
References: <bc2a46b6b79da7fad416c948d0ff00a3@remailer.metacolo.com>

On Tue, 7 Oct 2003 23:24:10 +0000 (UTC), Anonymous Sender <Roger Wiseman> wrote:
: SMARTER people know how to block such items in the first place.
: Apparently, that doesn't include YOU.

And DUMB people try to netcop a second time while stupidly revealing that stratuswave.net is their ISP. Ready to lose that ISP too, mensa-boy, after trying to hide it for a year? Mess with me in real life, and you will always pay a price.

As Darth Vader said, "You should not have come back."
--(end quote)--

I should point out to you, Woger, that you HAVE lost that ISP. You aren't still sitting around waiting for Stratuswave to dump you; they dumped you long ago. Thus the claim you made ("I'm still waiting to lose my ISP") is an outright lie.

[462 additional lines of drivel snipped.]

I am flattered that you save and edit everything that I post. Quite obviously, you recognize my greatness. Do you reread my old posts whenever you need inspiration, or are they background material for the next great novel you're writing?

no the answer is not to be based on wether it does more harm than good the question that must be answered isfirst what regulatory prupose does it serve

no regulatory purpose and the test is ilegeal even if it could be shown to do more good than harm

the other question is does the test serve the PUBLIC interest interest no Procder ever deals with the issue of how Code testing benifits

Any 12 year old can learn code in 2 weeks. Getting rid of it would not dumb down Ham radio at all. Code is a good thing to know. Whether you use it or not is a personal preference. I think programming you're own software to send code yourself and building your own radio is a lot more technical than learning code.

Today on the Show more talk on the ASSHOLES called CONSOLIDATED COMMUNICATIONS and CTITECH and why they would rather listen to members of a NEO-NAZI BOARD then their own users...and the possible law suit I might be bring to the Courts, including but not limiting to....CITITECH not notifying the phone company to shut the DSL line off (according to the phone company they (CTITECH) should of notified them) and since the Service had been shut off in July I had to pay for a DSL line up to September and CTITECH CLAIMS that I OWN them money...That DSL line isn't cheap!! How Consolidated claims that my service was removed after a warning and then claims I had no service with them?? How CTITECH and CONSOLIDATED COMMUNICATIONS suppresses speech, CITECH CLAIMS that their are other internet services in this town yet, those services in this town and surrounding area doesnot have software for their service for MAC...I'm also looking to sue the state for do little to resolve this problem and allowing indiviuals on a NEO_NAZI board make death threats against me..the same NEO-NAZI'S that complainted to ISP. ALSO on tonight show...discussion on the Fascist Communication Commission (FCC) and how they supress speech on the radio and how they have ham operators do their dirty work.

Neither the Code NOR Theory tests will weed out the bad radio operator any more than a driving test will weed out the DUIs - OR - the Physical agility, legal and other exams will weed out bad cops. Those tests are only tests of "Proficiency" in the subject matter - NOT - "Mentality". Those tests won't stop the trash.
But those who choose to not learn code will continue to bitch about why they shouldn't. OK, DROP the code.....Next you'll want the "Theory" taken away too. Want to bet?

B4 you post more kiddie porn cartoons at your web site, consider this breaking news.....

Friday, October 6, 2006
By KIMBERLY EDDS
The Orange County Register

SANTA ANA • An inmate awaiting trial on child pornography charges was beaten to death in a shower at the Theo Lacey Branch Jail by a group of fellow inmates Thursday night, officials said.

John Derek Chamberlain, 41, of Mission Viejo was arrested Sept. 14 on suspicion of having child pornography with intent to sell. He pleaded not guilty Sept. 18 and his trial was scheduled for Oct. 24.

Chamberlain was awaiting his trial in a section of the jail that houses nonviolent criminal offenders, sheriff's spokesman Jim Amormino said. He was in the shower at about 6:30 p.m. Thursday when an unknown number of inmates attacked him, he said.

"They kicked him • they beat him while he was in the shower," Amormino said. "Then they dragged him to another location near his bunk and they beat him some more."

Chamberlain was transported to UCI Medical Center in Orange, where he was pronounced dead at 7:30 p.m.

"Not every move is being monitored," Amormino said. "They are being held for nonviolent crimes. The guard isn't standing there watching them shower."

A total of 140 inmates were being held in that section of the jail at the time.

I have an idea. This should thin the ranks of amateurs and let Big Brother have the bands as is desired. We all know the FCC wants to sell the bands to the highest bidder. In addition to the code requirement, lets have proficiency testing in SSB, FM, RTTY, PSK-31 and Packet. That should just about kill the code proponents off, as they are mostly too old, addled, and unable to learn. That way, even they won't be able to use their bands without these proficiencies.

Sounds like a plan, eh?

The modulation was done in the ground lead, not the aerial lead. (They used the term "aerial" in those days).

It was practical enough to be heard across the pond.

Webster's spells it "minutia" for singular, "minutiae" for plural.

The main point is that it's not superfluous. Voice radio was "practical" enough for MW broadcasting by 1920 - that's not an opinion, it's a demonstrated fact.

Yet the use of Morse Code in non-amateur radio communications continued for many decades after that. The maritime communications folks were still using it less than a decade ago.

Not any more. Other methods replaced it by 1920.

No, that's not necessarily true.

For one thing, Fessenden held the patents. (He had at least 500 patents, btw). For another, new techniques appeared so fast in those days that there wasn't a need to copy Fessenden's method.

No, it's a fact. Look up the ages of pioneers like Armstrong, Fessenden, Beverage etc. in 1920. They were young men.

The wireless operators on the Titanic weren't even 25 years old. They were the best Marconi could supply.

Remember this classic quote?:

"I've always had trouble with integrating "youngsters" in what is a primarily _adult_ skill/technique recreational activity." (Len Anderson, Sept 2, 1996)

Len don't do documentation, Dave.

Actually, there were still some landline telegraph operations in operation in 1969. They may have continued beyond that year.

The important point was that the use of Morse Code in radio continued long past the middle of the 20th century.

Not superfluous at all. A landline operator knew the wrong code.

Except it's not really true.

Duplex and quadruplex telegraph circuits used polarity reversal and other methods beyond on-off. Carrier was used as well - often frequency-shift.

And the most modern communications today - fiber optics - is really nothing more than on-off keying of a light beam.

I think you're missing the point, Dave.

Len has spent more than a decade here on rrap. He's barraged rrap and the FCC with torrents of words about a simple license test - even though he is not a radio amatuer and will probably never be one.

After the restructuring of 2000, it seemed like a "slam dunk" that the FCC would just drop code testing as soon as it could. Len even said he would "go for Extra right out of the box" back in January of that year. But he didn't.

In July 2003 the treaty requirement went away, and it really seemed like a "slam dunk" that code testing would soon go away in the USA.

But now it's 3-1/2 years later, and despite 18 petitions and an NPRM, the rules haven't changed. FCC won't even say when they will make a decision.

In fact, the old "omnibus" NPRM (04-140, IIRC) is still working its way through the system. That NPRM will almost certainly yield an R&O before the Morse Code one does. But there's no indication from FCC when the "omnibus" R&O will show up, let alone the Morse Code changes.

Of course FCC will probably just drop Element 1 eventually. But they're in no hurry to do so. By the time FCC gets around to announcing its decision, Len may not have anybody to rag on about it.

Plus if FCC does drop Element 1, what will Len do? There won't be anything left for him to argue about, and nobody to argue with. So he's working on some new angles - which are really just old ones warmed up again. Meanwhile, he's obviously upset, worried and angry.

Len could have had an Extra with just a 5 wpm code test way back in 1990. But he didn't. That says it all.

And just who do you think developed these modes? How new do you think these modes are? It seems like everyone I contact on the "new" mode of PSK31 is retired and has been for many years.

When CW is eliminated they may want to do CB reviews to sell more magazines because there will be a whole new type of down-graded ham to market memberships to. In fact, they should change the name of "QST" to "Ten-Four Good Buddy" magazine.

I could go for that.

The more testing, the better. Then outsiders would look at the amateur radio service and see valuable and capable operators, they would see our spectrum wasn't being wasted by people that only know how to talk into a microphone to communicate.

Thanks. :-) Great idea.

You don't need to know my callsign, all you need to know is that CW makes for more skilled amateurs and that's why we need to retain the requirement. CW also works a little as a filter to keep the sick, lame and Lazy off HF. We need to bring back the CW requirement for Techs so we can raise the intelligence level of conversations on the repeaters.

You think that's bad? Wait until HF sounds 11 meters and you can't find a decent contact anywhere. You'll see I was right.

I crawled out of my hole around restructuring time. Then the ARRL and FCC screwed ham radio. I went back in my hole again. Now the FCC and it appears with the blessings of the ARRL is planning to toss CW all together. I come out of my hole to fight for the integrity of ham radio once again, but when the R&O comes out eliminating CW, I'll crawl back into my hole again. Leaving you and everyone else the problem of trying to deal with poor behavior and operating practice on the bands. The result of dumbing down licensing.

Outcome based education doesn't work, what makes you think outcome based licensing will?

But people don't want to be skilled at anything anymore. They don't want to make an effort to learn CW, they may not make an effort to learn other things to advance themselves technically either.

Mrs. Wiseman,

Why doesn't Woger post anymore? Is it because he's shacking up with N9OGL and Todd doesn't have internet? I hope they're working hard to get Omega One back on the air, but I'm sure they're too busy doing other things.

Mark,

You don't know what ham radio is about. I think if you just sit back and read the threads, instead of screwing them up with your insane babble, you might learn something. Of course, that depends on whether or not you really want to learn something.

Cecil, you've been like that since day one. I knew years ago arguing with Ham radio is dead when the CW requirement goes. Then that last step to pull the plug on it totally will be to eliminate the written exams.

I have the problem and I'll never be a code op.

Starting over: In the first case, I swapped the space and the letter "e."
In the second one I double-lettered the "i" instaed of the "t." (Another real one with "instead" in the last sentence.)

The problem is real and it's maddening. When somebody tells me I can learn code if I really apply myself, I am tempted to go back at him with something like, "True, and you could grow back the hair on your bald head if you really apply yourself." Yes, it really is like that, except that there's no combover for dyslexia.

I have to dial the phone very carefully and I must read back phone numbers, as I do not translate them well among seeing, hearing, writing and dialing them.

This seems to be a problem associated with the orderly sequencing of things.
Otherwise, I'm pretty good at math and very good at anything graphical (maps, diagrams, schematics) or verbal (vocabulary, word games, puzzles, puns). Go figure.

Thanks for asking.

I don't live on top of a coal mine, UnWiseman. I bought the home and the coal mine traveled. It is now near me. If the coal mine would like to proceed under my home, I'll be paid five to ten times the current market value of my home. Should that happen, I'll move wherever I feel like moving. You should be so lucky.

So you've heard. I've worked many French stations on many bands. At no time did I mention their wives having sex with the dog, working as prostitutes or groups of other men. At no time did I write about them having sex with their sisters, mothers, fathers, children or the dead.

Yes, Ray is in a wheelchair. It doesn't need polishing but he could use some help. Can we count on you to volunteer your time or resources for a fellow radio amateur, Rog? Perhaps instead of just lurking on the local repeaters, you could actually engage Ray in a conversation.

Ray has physical problems. You have mental problems. Ray is getting treatment for his physical problems. Would you like for me to see what I can do about getting you help for your mental problems? Maybe the demons can be made to go away.

It is a sad legacy. Pathetic, really.

I used to hold out a small semblance of hope that Woger would maybe, just maybe, post something more original and thoughtful than his standard, run-of-the-mill filth. However, it has become glaringly obvious over the past months that Woger is descending ever deeper into his self-made well of despair and is incapable of being anything other than what he is.
Yes, pathetic is an adequate descriptor.

The format isn't sold at all. I'd think anyone who'd been a ham for a year or two would have known that.

I read the words "formalism" and "form". I saw nothing about a format.

Why no, Brian. I'd think just about any radio amateur would know that.
There are even software programs incorporating the radiogram format so that you needn't write anything with a pencil or pen.

Yes. There is nothing currently underway to move toward anything in the

I'm not particularly worried about Len Anderson showing up on the ham bands with a shiny new Extra which he'll have obtained from a very worn and tattered box.

How is that different from the way he has always acted here?

Len could have had a no-code tech ages ago. It would have provided him with access to the VHF/UHF bands--the ones he says are where the action should be.

I find it rather amusing. here you are trying to hurl insults at me and yet, you haven't even mastered the barest concepts of an intellectual conversation.

and here is what pisses you off: I am right and you know. and thats what scares you the most.

you really are clueless. you dump on me simply because you can't deal with your own problems. In fact, at this point, you can't deal with any problems. This is why you lash out to so little effect.

I was right before too. this is another of your various nyms. Hell, I even know who you are in real life and frankly, I feel sorry for you. all that grey matter and you did nothing with it. so sad really.

ah well, time to put you back on the shelf like many of my other toys. :)

The theory questions even the extra exam is not that difficult. A decent electronics tech with an AA degree can master that test. In fact the tests are so dummied down that just about anyone that has the ability read and comprehend can pass them with the minimal of coaching. So if you think so highly your "Theory" tests then I hate to burst your bubble.

Why should proficiency in one means of communication hender operation in another? I tend to think that those that are very proficient with morse code tend to spend more of their time with that mode of communication. Why should there be a limitation on other modes that do not wish to use that mode? Most hams learn morse code and then forget it. I have no issue with showing proficiency in a means of communication to get priviledges. I have no issues with showing a proficiency with "theory" as a means of priviledges.

The thing here is usage of the airwaves is a priviledge and not a right. So what ever the government cares to do in this avenue is fine with me. I will take advantage of what ever they offer me.

It appears that Len expects me to reply to his "you have never..." statements by saying what I have done in non-amateur radio. Old trick, doesn't work.

The other reason for Len's antics is so he can tell us, once again, the different things he's done.

Have you noticed that Len doesn't ask about what other people have done in amateur radio? And this is an amateur radio newsgroup!

Note the dig at my BSEE and MSEE degrees. What Len doesn't realize is that, in the history of electrical engineering, all sorts of now-incredible things were once considered practical.

For example, the very first operational general-purpose electronic digital computer was the ENIAC, which was built at one of my alma maters here in Philadelphia. Its design and construction were paid for (some would say "subsidized") by the U.S. Army (some would say "the taxpayers"). Its original stated purpose was for the calculation of artillery aiming information.

Some may point to machines like the Colossus, Mark 1 or even the ABC as the "first computer". But they all lack something that ENIAC had. Some, like the ABC and even Babbage's Difference Engine, were never fully operational. Some, like the Mark 1, used relays and mechanics for calculation, and were not really electronic. Some were built for a specific task, such as breaking codes, and were not really general purpose. Some were partly or entirely analog, such as the Differential Analyzer. ENIAC was the first to do it all.

ENIAC took up an enormous amount of space and power, used over 17,000 tubes and required programming in machine language to do anything useful.

Its complexity and sheer size meant that breakdowns were frequent. One solution was to never turn it off, because many failures occurred during turn-on and turn-off.

Part of the problem was that the parts used in the original construction were not the most reliable possible. ENIAC was built under wartime restrictions, and they had to use what they could get. The quality of some parts, particularly common octal tubes, noticeably decreased over the war years because they were being made by a variety of companies, using inexperienced people and whatever facilities were available. The experienced tube companies and people were needed for radar and proximity fuse work, not the manufacture of 6SN7s.

The reliability of ENIAC was such that it would typically run for 1 to 2 days before something needed fixing. Its record was only about 5 days of continuous operation. The folks using it got very very good at identifying and fixing the problems.

ENIAC was never duplicated. During its development, so much was learned that newer machines like EDSAC, EDVAC and ultimately the UNIVAC were designed, rather than repeat the ENIAC design.

The points of this little bit of history are these:

By modern standards, or even those of 20, 30, or 40 years ago, ENIAC is/was totally impractical.

But by the standards of its time, it was a tremendous advance. Calculations that took weeks using pre-ENIAC methods could be done in seconds using the machine. The boundaries of "numerically hard" calculation were pushed back enormously.

Most important of all, the ENIAC was considered "practical" enough by the US Army. Soon after it was publically announced in 1946, the Army moved it to the Aberdeen Proving Grounds in Maryland, where it was used for its intended purposes until 1955.

> >> Practicality had to be defined by the time in which something took > >> place. Otherwise you're left playing a game of "what if the U.S. had > >> the atomic bomb in 1917?"

That's why I wrote the above ENIAC story. ENIAC was practical in its time.

How many computers made today have a useful life as long as ENIAC?

btw, in 1976, ENIAC was returned to where it was built, and a museum display set up with parts of it. In the 1990s, part of it was restored to operating condition, and some calculations done as a demonstration.

I got to see and touch parts of ENIAC. Also read the papers on it. A machine that changed the world, made from very ordinary parts and techniques, assembled in a new way.

There are AM BC receivers from the 1920s that, if restored, will perform admirably today in their intended purpose.

Some NTSC TV sets from 60 years ago, if restored, can still be used to watch VHF TV. There's a website showing a 1954 RCA color set in operation - today. Of course HDTV will eventually replace NTSC.

repeated.

White's is very good - for what it covers. It essentially stops long before WW2. Its treatment is heavy on broadcasting, light on amateurs and nonbroadcasting commercial operation. IMHO.

It's pretty easy to look up the ages of those folks. Of course Len will

It's an untruth. My history sources go far beyond ARRL publications.
And ARRL history isn't "bowdlerized".

Both are true. I was writing about non-amateur use of Morse Code in radio.

Yep.

In fact, here in the USA, there were at least three codes in use until 1912. Besides "American" and "Continental", the US Navy had its own code.

Even though the Berlin conference of 1906 had specified Continental for radio use, the USA did not universally adopt it. That all changed with the new radio laws of 1912.

But that was illogical.

The FCC would not violate the treaty about code testing. They said so in the R&O for the 2000.

Len claimed he was once up to about 8 wpm with Morse Code, before he quit - gave up - trying to learn it.

If that were true, why wouldn't he be able to relearn it enough to pass Element 1? Maybe that claim wasn't entirely true?

Or maybe it's the written tests that are the problem?

To do so would require not only a license, but assembling a station.
Note that while Len talks endlessly about places he has worked and projects he has worked on, there's almost nothing about radio projects
he has done himself, with his own money, at home.

There's the one-tube unlicensed oscillator transmitter of 1948, his conversion of some ARC-5s and their sale, the store-bought ICOM receiver and the compact Johnson....and not much else.

Actually top posting is a sign of experience. Us guys that were on the internet back when it was run by darpa always top posted. That was because we were running very slow lines, typically 110 to 300 baud, and it was desirable not to have to wait through the down load of a dozen copies of the same quoted material as we progressed through a thread. Bottom posting forced everyone on the newsgroup to fully download every article waisting tons of our very limited bandwidth and time. Top posting allowed you to get right to the meat of the article in the first few seconds of downloading... and it allowed you the option of continuing to footnotes if you really needed to.

You newbies have dozens of ways of trying to impose your will on the group.
Most of your so called rules of etiquette are simply you following the bottom posting convention that was set up as a default on internet explorer. Rn, trn, tin, and other premicrosloth news readers defaulted to top posting.

You are so spoiled by high bandwidth and large amounts of memory that you think that a posting arrives at your machine in its full length instantly.. and for all practical purposes, it does.

I can go either way. I do, however, get very tired of having to scroll through the same old quoted crap at the top of post after post... just to get to the bottom and find the highly informative, but typical, "me too" tacked onto the end.

What I do and say has nothing to do with what YOU do, Porkie.

It's all about you, fatboy.

I wasn't accusing Todd of anything.

I have been rubbing Todd's nose in hios own stupid comments, just like I do you.

Which still ahs nothing to do with what Mike was saying.

YOU are in control of your own behaviour.

That you choose to act the way you do is YOUR choice. No one twisted your fat, greasy arms.

> I will not allow Robeson or anyone else to sence by harrassment if

What you mean is that you intend to continue to spam the NG no matter what. I have no doubt that the three or four posts I manage to do this morning will spawn a whole new gamut of NG smut from you, Morkie.

If you mean more than 50% of the people agree with me that you're Bzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzzt!

My bullshit detector just went off real loud. Here is an authoritative statement about ARPANET from one of Comer's books:

"Initially, most of the leased data circuits in the ARPANET operated at 56 Kbps, a speed considered extremely fast in 1968 but slow by current standards." -- Douglas E. Comer, Internetworking with TCP/IP, Volume One, 3rd Edition, Prentice-Hall (1995), page 57.

300 baud, my ass! You should have been on a time sharing machine connected directly to the 56K ARPANET, so don't bother to backpedal by claiming dialup speeds. (And of course Usenet didn't even begin until the 80's, shortly after ARPANET had ended.)

Don't try to bullshit someone who has forgotten more about the subject than you have yet to learn.

AMERICA IN DANGER of its own out-of-control Bio-Terror:
Is 1984 here? Or cripping... God help us, blinded!
Originally Secret Bio-Aerosols are misused to HARM and Torture in U.S.A.
Tempering with pills/ medicine/ treatments to HARM and DISABLE !

Our government needs TORTURE in U.S.? See details below...
It has your VOTE, support? Abused... for power-grab or vicy-terror!
Transitory harm and HELL are U.S.-legal?

Did Denny Hastert cover the basterd? And other Washington freaks?

CRITICS (political/social/cultural) are harassed and secretly persecuted along with their KIDS in schools/colleges, especially, during tests/exams (Think: Guantanamo "stress-positions" in the context of 1984-technologies)
Female FBI-informers are coerced and abused!

Bio-Aerosols and aerosolized chemicals are used to cause:
- severe colds/coughs turning into bronchitis, eye irritation
- bacterial pneumonia/other pneumonia, shortness of breath
- surges of severe headaches, migraines, dizziness, etc.
- fainting collapses by symptoms-mimicking aerosols
- severe stomach pains (sharp, burning, nausea, etc)
- chest-wall pains, heart-muscle inflammations/trauma, etc.
WORSE:
- heart attacks under cover of second-hand smocking
- aerosolized chemicals from the death-penalty drugs
- car crashes/accidents by Vertigo-causing aerosols
- car accidents due to the fine/controlled tempering
- liver/organ failure by small-dose toxins (trace-less?)
- cancer-causing/facilitating - months-long assasinations
This "Yushchenko syndrom" CAN destabilize NATIONs Waste, Fraud, Cronism and Abuse in HomeSec/FBI
Fabrication of Believable Info/Manufacturing of accidents

U.S. mail IS polluted in "anthrax-like" manner to HARM critics Libraries, airplanes, hotels, offices, buses, trains - all polluted!
Remote control, off-jacket/off-book/off-paper pollutant attacks!

A network of Secret Gas-Aerosol Rooms operated in US
(in Philadelphia, Narberth, Lower Merion, PA)
(in Wilmington and Newark, DE)
(in Hampton, Williamsburg and Richmond, VA)
AND ELSEWHERE.... details below...
Freddie May/Freddie Mac likely used to buy silent cooperation
Bio-aerosols used to hurt and simulate panic attacks, etc.!
Soviets locked critics into nut-houses, now WE do the same!
Symptoms-mimicking aerosols do HARM, weak or ill people.

Echo-location/wire-taps/listening used to turn homes into cages!

Say "Stop, I care" - call Senate (202) 224-3121
House of Representatives (202) 225-3121
What IS going on in America? Print and Post
Manufacturing of FEAR to grab more Power and Money, of course.
Tragedy IS used to Power Graib, while Fear is molded into profit!

Full text was at:
http://buyit.philly.com/findit/search/results.jsp?catId=krd_philenqda...

This was a new on-line ad placed in Philadelphia Inquirer and Philadelphia Daily News on www.philly.com (see full text below)
It was about the secret aerosols rooms in US. One could find it by searching "secret", say, in the ad section of philly.com.

Democracy can not function effectively without the informed public. As a former NASA Langley scientist working in the area of nanotechnology and nanoscale particles, I have been recently exposed to the establishment of secret gas-aerosol rooms inside of United States, at least in the Mid-Atlantic region (from Philadelphia to Virginia).
First, the highly irritant aerosols have surfaced at the NASA Langley Research Center in several safety accidents. Investigations were blocked, probably, because of lack of Congressional approval for such financially-lucrative research at NASA. Later, these aerosols had been encountered outside of NASA in Virginia, Delaware and Pennsylvania
This points out to yet another proliferation of originally-sensitive technologies into domestic American life to hurt and harass people without a proper oversight and much control. This amounts to torture, extra-judicial prosecution and authoritarian intimidation tactics. The use of such irritants and the operations of the secret gas-aerosol rooms are gross violations of human and constitutional rights of American citizens and various domestic and international laws.

----------Full text of an ad from Philadelphia's phily.com----------
TORTURE IN USA: Secret Aerosol Rooms
US Scientist needs legal help dealing with the secret aerosols rooms (SARs) operated illegally in Philadelphia area, Newark (DE), Hampton and Williamsburg (VA). Highly volatile aerosols with and without bacterial content cause dry cough, airways and eyes irritation, chest pain and inflammation. FBI and Homeland Security associates are likely operators of SARs, while collaborators may be hotel staff and landlords, who get financial/material or other incentives. US citizens and kids are victims.

Torture is any act by which severe pain, whether physical or psychological, is intentionally inflicted on a person as a means of intimidation, deterrence, revenge, punishment, sadism, or information gathering. At times, medicine and medical practitioners have been drawn into the ranks of torturers, either to judge what victims can endure, to apply treatments which will enhance torture, or as torturers in their own right. http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Torture

America in Danger!

America in danger -
The vice is NOT impeached.
America in danger -
The public trust is breached.

Big Brother spins protection
And fear is used to clamp.
Democracy needs action!
On which side do you stand?

Which side are you on, boys?
Which side moves you on?
Which side are you on, girls?
Which side did you wrong?
(Chorus after F. Reece)

Your church is burned by haters.
The priests to go to jail?
Your dreams are cheyned by traitors,
But hope still shines through veil.

Dust rooms came back to gas us
With neo-Naz (or Con) embrace...

New immigrants do make US!
And not the SSuper-race...

***

The Government of Torture

Our government needs TORTURE?!
It has your VOTE, and, now, support?
But peace (not vice) needs steady nurture
And trustful words of calm rapport.

Beware of loud, but FALSE, ideas
That flame a thirsty hellish torch.
Protect the old and true ideals
And Constitution's civic urge.

Yes, torture IS a hellish torch -
In bloody hands, a blinded sword,
With Constitution used to forge
All laws on rights as mere absurd!

Remember victim's silent cry
And SEE the Christ in all of us.
Don't let your government to spy
And torture with some bio-dust.

There is NO good use for evil torture!
No matter how the need is spinned
By Nixon's men, as bloody sergeants,
While truth is painfully re-skinned.

Yep, those were the backbones of ARPANET. We had ONE at the University of Maryland back in the 1970s. That leased line cost thousands of dollars per month, and was paid for by darpa. Compare that to the backbones of today which are measured in terrabits per second. These 56K backbones were connected to mainframe computers that acted as concentrators, and provided connections to other mainframes, and to thousands of users on timesharing systems. Yes, I have that right, thousands of users shared a single 56K backbone.

Those users that were local to the concentrator (eg, in the computer room) were connected to the mainframe by various speed RS-232 lines, but those who were on remote dial up connections were connected by good old bell 103, 110 to 300 baud modems.

> 300 baud, my ass! You should have been on a time sharing machine > connected directly to the 56K ARPANET,

Yep, we were on timesharing machines, Univac 1106's, 1108's, and 1140's, and as I said, thousands of users shared a single 56K leased line into Darpanet. Do the math, if you can't, I'll help you:

56K/1000 = 56 bps.

If there were only 1000 users vying for the net at the same time, they could each pump 56bps into the backbone. But there were many many more than that, and they weren't always needing the net all of the time.

(hence the name concentrator)

so don't bother to backpedal by

I'm sorry, I don't backpedal for idiots. I don't brake for them either.

Riiiight! Just because you can look up darpa on a wiki somewhere, doesn't mean you can understand what you have read.

and in stating that you just used the Consitution of the USA as toilet paper

it is just that simple the govt officail to regulate radio would derive from the "Nessary and proper clause" the ITU treaty under the supremacy clause and the rest to US (or the staes how are then exclude from radio regulation by the ITU treay) in partical the Govt has one other source of power over radio a(and anything else they should not have) the willing of citizens to lie and take it

The Govt had the power (and legal duty) to do code testing till 2003
when the treaty changed

the FCC has conceeded its intent we are waiting on them to push the paper

James,

Rethink what I wrote. I'm not claiming the tests are "all that"..... You are right, they ARE dummied down and NO, you do NOT need an AA degree to pass the Extra. Just some diligent studying. I was merely saying NEITHER test will eliminate the crap - for starters. BUT those who "are" whining about the code - if they get their wish, will then want the written exam dropped too. In other words - FREE - uninhibited passage. IF we gave Drs', Lawyers, Drivers, Pilots and other licenses away like some want the Ham licenses handed out, where would we be? Ham radio may not be all that, but it is what it is. Anything more stripped away from it - and it won't be worth having.

"I" had to learn the code, it really is no big deal. Do I use it? Not much, but I'm still glad I learned it. It was a matter of self discipline. Hey, drop the code......Who am "I" to force it down anyone's throat? That isn't my aim or argument. Again - you're going to see the push for the rest to be dropped too - some just aren't satisfied. Mark my words.

duely marked but exactly who do you think is going to push for this?

personaly I will push to cponsolate down the number of classes which will reduce the number of tests of course and since there will not be as amny defferent set of band edges the number of question wiull certainly drop further

but the only people claiming the written test will are those insistign
the code test should should not die

I read your post and understood it. My beleifs is that those that will complain about a "theory" test are those that want the license handed to them. They don't want any kind of test. Unless the government does that, I still hold that some form of written test is applicable.

I learned enough code and then I never touched a key again. Made two contacts total via morse code. Never cared for it and never intend to use it. At the time my interests were more in VHF/UHF anyways. HF was to much like CB. He who had the biggest amp and antenna was heard.
VHF/UHF systems require more than a big amp and a big antenna.

I whined about the code requirements and still do. But I also understand, that what ever the government determines as the standard for obtain levels oflicensing are the rules that I ahve to play with.
As I stated I have no issues with levels of "theory". That part to me is easier to learn.

Who is "we"?

FCC makes the rules. They're the ones who have to be convinced. For more than 25 years, FCC has been convinced that the Amateur Radio license exam requirements should be reduced. The changes have come a little at a time, but the direction has been the same since the late 1970s.

You raise some good points Jim. That's why I've always proposed the following licensing changes:

1: No more automatic renewals. Individuals must retest and pass all elements required for their license class.

2: The passing score for written exams needs to be raised to 85%.

3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.

4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Mark,

You provide nothing useful to the internet, you're a retard. If you were intelligent enough to post something someone could agree with or argue with you about, things would be different, but all your retarded ass can do is cut & paste one line mis-spelled babble, you contribute nothing to the group so you should keep your dumb-ass mouth shut until you have something useful to say. People may disagree with me on whether or not to keep CW, but at least it's discussion. Your posts are mindless retard cut & paste babble.

I get teased and forged by K4YZ and others too. I read the posts and have a good laugh, I don't need to follow up to them. You're too retarded to understand that and that's why they keep teasing your dumb ass.

From this point on anyone that teases your stupid ass has my blessing, I can understand after this last batch of cut & paste of yours why they do it. I tried to be as nice to you as I could, but you're just too fucking retarded to deal with.

That's not dyslexia - it's your fingers and your brain not working together. "The exnt itme" looking right to you would be dyslexia.

Except that I type like that too sometimes (and I'm not dyslexic), which is why, even with a spell checker I reread my posts before posting them. And I can still copy CW at somewhere between 15 and 20, although I haven't sat down to copy any long transmissions in over 20 years - but I used to rag chew at 40+.

There's a difference between a keyboard and a key or bug. (Never could get the hang of paddles.)

Since CW is more a verbal skill than a written skill, dyslexia shouldn't affect it much (although I don't know of any studies done on the subject - it's just a seat-of-the-pants guess).

So you think that 1000 users at your location were always using ARPANET simultaneously? Please don't tell me that someone gave you an engineering degree, because you obviously didn't understand the course work.

Comer's books on TCP/IP are standards, and they don't involve a wiki.
They happen to be in my library of reference textbooks, and they happen to be standard references kept in all university libraries.

The claim about slow speeds on ARPANET and Usenet is quite stupid.
ARPANET and Usenet did not exist at the same time. ARPANET didn't use TCP/IP protocol, and it gave way to what is now called the Internet when TCP/IP became the standard packet delivery protocol. Shortly after that, the message posting system called Usenet was formalized to run on the Internet and on several other message delivery systems (such as UUCP). So your reference to ARPANET is simply irrelevant.
ARPANET and Usenet never coexisted, making the claims about 300 bps and other speed limitations total BS intended to impress the ignorant.

Enough said. Conversation ended. You don't seem to be worth any followup messages until you do some additional reading.

> dumbing down or simplification.

That's not how it works. What does "we won't go for anymore dumbing down or simplification" mean, specifically? Those terms mean nothing to FCC - they want specifics.

For example, you might consider the reduction of the General and Extra to 5 wpm to be "dumbing down". But way back in 1990, FCC made those licenses available with just 5 wpm code and a medical waiver. FCC has said, publicly, that they see no difference between medically-waivered
"5 wpm" hams and those who passed 13 and 20 wpm when it comes to enforcement issues. How do you respond to that argument?

Way back in the early 1980s, a president with initials RR was elected in part on the promise to "get government off your back". That translated to less regulation and simpler regulation, as well as less money for "legacy" government agencies like FCC. So they have gone for simpler and easier ever since.

> They'll do what they want, but at least > we tried.
>
Did you comment on the recent Notices of Proposed Rulemaking? Or the various proposals that FCC accepted comments on?

That's how FCC accepts input.

And when the various proposals have been presented, the majority of those commenting support Morse Code testing, and relevant written testing.

But they aren't an overwhelming majority. 55% is about the max.

And FCC doesn't have to do what the majority wants. They decide what to do based on a whole bunch of factors. Comments are only one factor.

tests have no effect.

Would you rather that we not have driving tests, since the they

No need to bet.

There have already been proposals to reduce the written exams below what they are now. Fortunately, they have been rejected by FCC - so far.

Well, some do. I don't know about "most".

How many hams learn the theory and then forget it?

> > I have no issue with showing proficiency in a means of

The argument seems to be this:

"Why should someone have to learn Morse Code in order to use other modes? Let those who want to use it, learn it, and the rest not"

If you accept that argument, how do you oppose the following:

"Why should someone have to learn theory in order to use a manufactured rig?"

"Why should someone who only wants to operate HF have to learn about VHF and UHF?"

"Why should someone who only wants to operate QRP have to learn about RF exposure?"

"Why should someone who only wants to use vacuum tube equipment have to learn about solid-state?"

Etc.

In other words, why should anyone have to learn anything they don't intend to use?

Why?

And who will do all the testing? There are over 650,000 US hams now. We get a couple of thousand new hams per month - that works out to about 2,000 exams per month.

If 10% of those 650,000 have to retest each year, that's 65,000 per year. Which is more than 5,400 additional exams per month.

Are you volunteering to do all those exams?

Why? Does a person forget that much in a year?

And who will do all the additional testing?

So what's the hold up? Code has nothing to do with intelligence, not6hing to do with dumbness.

Do you plan to take up arms against your government if they drop the Nope. No comments from "Slow Code."

Slow is a little slow on the uptake. Others mitght know him as W3RV.

So?

They asked for a concensus. The ARRL refused to give them one.

Obviously the ARS isn't a popularity contest. Hopefully its not a "Good Old Boys" club either.

Why retest knowledge? Not necessary unless your intention is to reduce the ranks of the amatuer radio service. Few if any government priviledges require constant retesting for renewal. Your thinking is not logical.Besides it increases the government and costs. The government would then be forced to charge for licensing.

Again 70% is sufficient. Raising to the limit you suggest is more a weed out than anything else.

>+++3: Code elements should be 13 wpm for General, and 20 wpm for Extra.
>+++

The ITU no longer requires CW for any of its commercial services. Why do you stillinsist on such high levels. Again your motive appears to be more selective as to who may be granted a license.

>+++4: Make the no-code license one year non-renewable.

Why? when this class already has very strong restrictive priviledges. This would not be the incentive to upgrade to a higher license. Some maybe satisfied with the priviledges of this class and making it a one year nonrenewable will not be the incentice to an upgrade path. Instead it will be another step in restricting any growth in the amature radiio service. Then again if you prefer dwindling numbers, go ahead. Radio and its associated costs can not compete with the internet. If I want to talk to some one in Australia it is now far easier to use IRC or other messaging programs in conjuction with the internet. If you intend to further restrict the amature service to nothing more than a "good ole boys club", then you yourself have become the problem.

It hasn't stopped him from trying. He has never become a radio amateur despite his several decades of self-declared "interest" in amateur radio.

He should just number them. Instead of typing all of those words over and over, he could just type something like "62."

If he tries a "you have never" and someone refutes it with details, Len simply clams up. If they voluntarily post material describing something they've done, Len uses that as an opportunity for insulting the poster.

Not many. I recall running Miniprop on an XT with no math copressor.
Forecasting took hours. I'd enter the solar flux and come back after a movie. Now, similar programs run on a modern machine in a second or two.

I'm glad we don't need that sort of thing today. I don't have room for an ENIAC. I wonder if Len ever saw or touched ENIAC. Surely we'd have heard about it by now--several times.

Those HDTV tuner boxes are quite common. If one uses one of them ahead of an old analong set and puts the tuner in the 480 interlaced mode, the analong TV is useful for many more years.

But Len refers to it as if it is the Bible. He usually follows one of those references with some sniping at the American Radio Relay League.

Len seldom lets the truth get in the way of one of his monologues.
Witness his frequent references to the MARS assignment I never had in Vietnam, despite the fact that I've corrected him each and every time.
That behavior is predicted in the profile.

Have you noticed that he has suddenly clammed up about my working with NASA? He tripped over the facts I strew in his path.

Either way, he didn't even attempt going for the most basic license class, much less the Extra. The echoes of his boast are all that's left.

of it.

Len was certainly quick to insult your homebrew gear though. I'm interested in the little 40m receiver described in this month's QST. I may have to build one of those.

My latest workshop efforts weren't difficult. I bought a Heathkit
HL-2200 HF amp--an SB-220 in brown clothing a couple of years back.
I got it expressly for the purpose of converting it to 6m. I had to throw together a circuit for reducing the amplifier keying circuit from 125v to 12v at about 2ma. After that, I modified the amp plate circuit and tuned input per a Hints and Kinks article. It didn't work as well as I thought it should have so I disconnected the entire 80/40m coil assembly and unwound all but 2 turns of the 20/15/10m coil. I tapped that at 1 1/4 turn with wide copper strap and threw it back together.
It delivers 900 watts on Six.

The interesting thing is that almost all amateur radio magazines have been attempting to feed us the line that amateur radio is not being dumbed down, yet it is quite obvious that it is.

Heh heh heh...the "high tech" of its time, a mere 30+ years ago. "Speedy" Teletype Model 33s (?) and "high speed" 300 baud video terminals (with local memory to print out screens on Teletypes) where I was using it. :-)

"Concentrators" still exist but in a vastly different form, configuration, and specifications. As a personal computer hobbyist since '76 I've not delved into them (no need to for personal dial-up connections) but know many who are; they have supplied some interesting literature on them as well as in-person explanations.

The first triode vacuum tube (deForrest called them "audions" in those days) was invented in 1906...same year as Reggie's "Christmas" broadcast. :-)

At NO TIME did any OTHER broadcaster or voice transmitter adopt the Fessenden brute-force amplitude modulator. NO ONE.

Not in the USA, not in Canada, not anywhere in the world.

So much for your redefinition of "practical."

this newsgroup. :-)

Tsk, tsk, you've TOLD ME what I should have done in the military, yet you've never served in the military or in the US government. I served 8 years in the US Army.
You can see and read what I did for three years there via:

http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/My3Years.pdf

6 MB in size, takes about 19 minutes download on a dial-up connection. Twenty pages with many photo illustrations.
High-power HF transmitters. 1953 to 1956.

Tsk, I have done so. All that you've displayed (via links) is an old 70's era receiver, supposedly built for less than $100, on Kees Talen's website "HBR" pages (HomeBrew Receiver, after the various "HBR" articles in QST of decades ago).

Tsk, tsk, that was before 1920. 1920 is 86 years ago.

Why do you live in the past so much?

Tom Edison thought for sure that Direct Current would be
The Way for widespread electrical power distribution. :-)

Is NOT practical now.

Academics once insisted that "current flow" was opposite that of electron flow. Was written up in lots of textbooks.

Is NOT practical now.

Some insist that "Greenlee Chassis Punches" are necessary for homebuilt radio construction.

Is ONLY "practical" for knocking out conduit attachment holes in electrical power distribution boxes or some 70s-era boatanchor construction project (i.e., using vacuum tubes and needing socket holes for same).

Greenlee is still a corporation in Rockford, IL, but they seem to have stopped making "chassis punches" for radio hobbyists.

ENIAC "broke codes?" Really? "Did it all?" :-)

Ever hear of 'the BSTJ?' That's the Bell System Technical Journal. Before the Bell break-up it was published (mostly) monthly. They had a nice write-up in it on the three electromechanical 'computers' that Bell Labs made for making Firing Tables during WWII.

Good old "amateur radio subject in an amateur radio newsgroup!" :-)

Tsk, in the history of the War Production Board, the number 1 priority went to the Manhattan Project. Second priority was the manufacture of quartz crystal units (a million a month total between '43 and '45). The company that would change its corporate name to MOTOROLA (Galvin Manufacturing) was the center of quartz production control but Galvin also designed and built wartime radios...one (the first handie-talkie) being done before the USA was drawn into WW2. Heck, Lewyt Vacuum Cleaner Company built high-power transmitters (BC-339) during WW2.

What did Jimmie do during WW2? I was a schoolchild then.
Did Jimmie get his proximity fused yet back then?

ENIAC flunked. It went defunct. One of a kind.

Try 51 years, not just 40 years ago.

According to Moore School PR and the Eckert-Mauchley company that also went defunct afterwards... :-)

>Calculations that took weeks using pre-ENIAC methods could be done in

Now, now, you are comparing pomegranites and pumpkins. Quit trying to compare humans operating Monroe or Friden desk calculators for those Firing Table data tabulations with the MINUTES it took using ENIAC.

>The boundaries of "numerically hard"

Tsk. It's a given that mechanical means, then electrical means has been acknowledged as making mathematical calculations faster since LONG before ENIAC existed.

The government PAID for it and now they were stuck with this big white elephant. Probably didn't bother declaring it "surplus" since no one wanted to buy it. :-)

>That's why I wrote the above ENIAC story.

BFD. You went to Moore, "touched" the museum piece that it is.

>How many computers made today have a useful life as long as ENIAC?

My HP Pavilion box for one. My wife's HP Pavilion for two.
One hellishly FASTER clock rate than ENIAC, enormous RAM,
ROM, and mass storage medium. Built about 4 years ago.

My Apple][Plus for three...built in 1980 sold to me in 1980...been running now and then ever since. Dinky little clock rate of 1 MHz, a thousand times slower than the HP Pavilions but still a lot faster than ENIAC could ever do.
A quarter of a century later it still boots up, runs programs.

>btw, in 1976, ENIAC was returned to where it was built, and a museum

[big Ben Stein "wowwwww..." here]

Thirty years before 1976 the Rosenwald Museum of Science and Industry in Chicago had a working interactive tic-tac-toe calculator made from relays. Was mounted behind glass so the visitors could see the relays in operation. Interactive,

Jimmie, any visitor could try it without instruction. :-)

>I got to see and touch parts of ENIAC.

Wowee. I've touched the Liberty Bell at Independance Hall in Philly. Between the two, I'd much prefer the Liberty Bell. ENIAC is defunct. Liberty is NOT.

>Also read the papers on it. A >machine that changed the world, made from very ordinary parts and

PR minutae you spout. Maybe you ought to get on a committee to build a SHRINE for ENIAC? "All worship the Machine That CHANGED THE WORLD!!!" :-)

>> > Webster's spells it "minutia" for singular, "minutiae" for plural.

Tsk, tsk, Jimmie lays on the MINUTAE in plural form so much that I was correct. :-)

WTF Moore School and ENIAC have to do with AMATEUR RADIO POLICY seems to have vanished in Jimmieworld.

Why? Aren't those good for 80m "CW" transceiver parts?
[rock-bound at 3.58 MHz... :-)]

"Cost less than $100...etc., etc., etc." :-)

>Of course HDTV will eventually replace NTSC.

"Eventually?!?" The transition phase is and has been underway
NOW, Jimmie. Here in the USA, not on some "website."

Once you watch DTV in operation, side by side with an older NTSC set, the tremendous difference in DTV can be seen AND heard. With the truly flat-screen LCD, Plasma, or DLP display with a wider picture than possible with NTSC, the detail and expanse is striking with DTV.

Jimmie say "if it ain't broke, don't fix it?" Tsk, Jimmie be the Amish of ham radio. Jimmie love horse-and-buggy comms using morse code? [note similarity of 'horse' and 'morse']

>He knows very little about me and has resorted to wild speculation and >untruths for a long time.

Tsk. Typical bluffmanship on Jimmie's part. He no say what he do but he IMPLIES lots. Sounds like that USMC Imposter Robeson's tactic.

Jimmie keep things SECRET. Very hush-hush. Somebody say Jimmie know nothing, they "LIARS." Just like Robeson.

>See above about ENIAC. It was very practical, in its time - but never >repeated.

ENIAC defuct. Flunked in reliability, flunked in architecture (BCD accumulators/registers, not binary). NEVER repeated.
A MUSEUM PIECE.

>I'm still looking for a definition of "morsemanship"

Poor baby. Can't understand it? Post-graduate degree and you still can't connect the dots? :-)

>My history sources go far beyond ARRL publications.
>And ARRL history isn't "bowdlerized".

ARRL carefully OMITS certain items of history and IMPLIES amateurs are 'responsible' for all advances. :-)

Beyond the Thomas White radio history pages, Jimmie not mention any of his "sources" that go beyond League publications.

>I was writing about non-amateur use of Morse Code in radio.

Why Jimmie do dat? This be AMATEUR Radio newsgroup.

>Notice how Len doesn't mention any HF experience of his after ADA, >except cb?

WRONG. Civil avionics work included HF...used in US Aviation Radio Service. Maritime Radio Service includes personal use of an HF SSB transceiver (SGC-2020) two years ago. Contract work involved DoD design and evaluation which did not need my civilian Commercial operator license sign-off.

>To do so would require not only a license, but assembling a station.

"Plug and play" nowadays, was that way a half century ago. :-) Collins Radio used to make whole stations, quit the amateur radio market and still makes money.

>Note that while Len talks endlessly about places he has worked and >projects he has worked on, there's almost nothing about radio projects
>he has done himself, with his own money, at home.

This newsgroup is Amateur Radio Policy, not Amateur Radio Homebrew. :-)

Jimmie wanna see my home workshop? Have it digitized, was sent to three others. Wanna see the HP 608D and the 606 signal generators, the 60 MHz dual-channel scopes (note plural), the 1 KW Variac below the bench?

Poor baby. Jimmie jealous? Jimmie work at just ONE employer his whole life? Jimmie NOT serve in military.
Jimmie NOT serve in government. Jimmie "serves" the nation by his ham radio hobby?

>There's the one-tube unlicensed oscillator transmitter of 1948, his >conversion of some ARC-5s and their sale, the store-bought ICOM
>receiver and the compact Johnson....and not much else.

WRONG, WRONG, WRONG.

Two complete ARC-5 receiver-transmitters for 40 meters.
Conversion earned me some money on resale. I still have one 6-9 MHz ARC-5 receiver that runs, assorted parts from both receivers and transmitters. Did that in 1948, not the "phonograph transmitter" built as a lark in 1947...which worked on the AM BC band and did not violate any FCC regulations at the time. :-)

You are confused with the 1947 HF regenerative receiver that I suppose DID 'regenerate' a bit much out a 200 foot long wire antenna at times. :-)

Oh, my, a "store-bought Icom receiver!" Their model IC-R70.
Paid for "in cash" (check, actually) at an HRO in Van Nuys, CA (later moved to two successive locations in Burbank, CA).
Cost about $600 then. No problem, could afford it.
Ask USMC Imposter Robeson about any of those HRO stores.
He says he's been to two of them "with friends." :-)

Would you like my old checkbook balance digitized so you can view it for your 'verification?' How about I digitize the receipt? Or do you want to wait for the famous Background Check that Paul seems to want done? :-)

Oh, yeah, the "compact Johnson." The E. F. Johnson
Viking Messenger is small but not necessarily compact.
If you need some verification I can get some URLs for CB nostalgia types for you. On the "compact johnson," your allusion to my penis, let's just say I've satisfied two wives and a dozen girlfriends with my "goodie woody." Would you be satisfied with my primary physician's note on its size, digitized and sent to you? Or will you wait for Paul's Background Check to verify that bit of AMATEUR RADIO POLICY you want to talk about? Hmmm? You like penises, Jimmie?

>> > Plus if FCC does drop Element 1, what will Len do?

Then I will drop the advocacy of eliminating the morse code test...as I have written many times in here. There would be no NEED for advocacy of eliminating that test since it had already been eliminated in that case.

Tsk, you are SO unbelieving, all that FABRICATION about "reasons" you imagine! Poor baby.

>> Len could have had a no-code tech ages ago.

Len had a Commercial First 'Phone since 1956, has used that in many more places on the EM spectrum than are allowed to US radio amateurs. Mostly for money but some times just for fun.

>See you on the air, Dave.

Using very slow-scan ATV? Perhaps using morse code pixels? You have morse code glasses? Your Elecraft kit have a built-in spectrum analyzer? Video viewer?

Tsk, tsk, in the usual display of humorless unpleasantness, Heil takes things out of context in order to attempt some kind of humiliation of those he doesn't like. :-)

Here is the original exchange between Brian Burke and Taken IN CONTEXT the exchange (try reading it as the spoken word) is amusing. Of course it is one-sided.

Of course it is sarcasm, but it is WRY sarcasm based on years of one-sided smug arrogance of morsemen in this newsgroup against all no-code-test advocates.
This newsgroup's amateurs allow very little objectivity and the pro-coders insist on strict adherence to THEIR opinions...and justify their attempts at humiliation and insult of no-code-test advocates as being "their right" or "for the good of ham radio" or other quaint, uncivil, but invalid rationalizations. :-)

Heil did the same OUT OF CONTEXT "quoting" of Brian Burke, adding in his pet phrase (which Heil says is "not" a personal insult) of "red-hatted monkey."

Heil has his own pet phrase for me, of course "not"
a personal insult in His rationalizations:

>The Old Organ Grinder, the man who is only here for CIVIL debate is >heard from.

Tsk, tsk. I am a civilian. :-)

I have ground pepper but never an organ. [I have yet to be in Fargo, ND, and would not be there playing with a chipper in the snow... :-)]

When arguing with UNCIVIL pro-coders (such as Heil and his out-of-context quoting uncivility) one cannot be a polite "goody two-shoes" respondent. Especially when the pro-coders are very concerned about "sphincters." :-)

While you guys are waiting for the Great Liberty Net
(the greatest net on ham radio - Sat evenings 10:00 PM on 3.950 LSB +/1 20kc QRM) check out the website http://www.ve7kfm.com/ for some VERY AMUSING audio clips of the guy from "Can-Ahhh-Duh" who loves Americans and other peoples. Where else caoud you get great DOWNLOADABLE SOUND FILES like the great Sid-the-Lid talking about "nig-er ballgames" and other stuff like this..?

Example: http://www.ve7kfm.com/niggers.mp3
"Madera's good friend Sid (BLB) discusses niggers: "Out of five channels on, we had six nigger ballgames." "

Where else but on HAM RADIO can you get such STELLAR ENTERTAINMENT as this ?? !!

I'm not looking for rationalizations. Your post wasn't some civil dissertation on your reasoned thoughts on removal of morse testing. No one here is bound to accept your thoughts, find amusement in them, refrain from jeering or from throwing tomatoes. :-)

Fuck the code only shit. Why should that be the only element? Why not make all amateurs retest in ALL modes, at all frequencies, et al. And what the hell, while we're at it, let's just go ahead and make it yearly. Don't let the old geezers off so easily. When a new mode is adopted, or allowed, make those bastards show proficiency there as well. That should just about do the ARS in. Why should you have it your way, SC?

Well said. SC and his ilk are what is wrong with the ARS today. But hell, who knows when I will need morse to facilitate my rescue from a capsized cruise ship in the Gulf of Mexico. I will be the one! No one will know there are really people inside the ship, unless of course, I pound the hammer I had with me on the inside of the hull. And to boot, the Coast Guard no longer teaches morse, so hopefully SC will be there to copy.

I don't hear/perceive/recognize/distinguish/discriminate the dits and dahs correctly. I can learn that dit-dah-dah-dit is G (or whatever it is -- I am not sure and I am certainly far, far beyond caring) and five seconds later not be able to distinguish it from dah-dit-dit-dah.

What's the fix for it?

Who has insisted that, Len. Feel free to use a drill and a saber saw

That's a factual error as anyone who builds linear amplifiers, builds other electronic gear or installs a ball mount for an antenna on an automobile can tell you.

There's another of your factual errors. Greenlee still sells chassis punches--round ones, square ones, those shaped for D-connectors, power sockets. There's even a hydraulic punch set. The U.S. Government buys loads of them. The company's "hole making" product information can be downloaded--all 7.9 mb of it.

Only a fraction of the American people are watching HDTV. Most aren't even aware of what will hit them in a couple of years. People are still running out to K-Mart and Wally World and buying new analog TV sets.
Some compromise sets are being marketed as EDTV for "Enhanced Definition".

> Once you watch DTV in operation, side by side with an older

It'll be possible to watch DTV with a simple converter. Those will extend the life of analog televisions for many years. The Feds are even going to help pay for the converter boxes. I don't recall them doing that when the UHF-TV channels came into existence.

There'll be a big learning curve for the non-city dwelling owners of new HDTV receivers. They'll find that they have to use antennas with fairly high gain, preamps and rotators. They'll be using those rotators quite often. I ended up buying a Channel Master rotator with remote control and memory.

Maybe you could whip together a modern, solid state version of the phono oscillator and play at being a junior ham, Len. You could CQ, assign yourself an "XB-523" call and all. You might convince a neighbor to build one too. You could have a blast.

I don't hear/perceive/recognize/distinguish/discriminate the dits and dahs

DRAT! And the Dems tried SO hard, too! From buying cigarettes for the homeless in Ohio to vote for Gore, to the Booze For Dem Votes in Illinois, you can't say they didn't give it a good try.
Next time around the Dems will have to resurrect more voters...seems the graveyards are chock full of Democrats just itching to vote one more time.

gee, one other thing... that url points to a forged note clearly made out in my name. it was posted from an ISP that I was never a user on. man. you are gullable if you continue to believe even the barest of forgeries made in my name....

besides, in 2005, I was 40 years old. how does that equate with the stated age in the note? in order to be the right age, that note would have had to have been posted in or around early to mid 1996 (yet the date on it clearly states 2005).

I give up. you are as stupid as you sound.....

Does anybody know???

Slow Code may be AB8MQ.
However...comma...
AB8MQ has opined that Slow Code is Stagger Lee, hot-ham-and-cheese, or Dave Heil, or Lloyd Davies, or Arf! Arf! or Billy Smith (who IS hot-ham-and-cheese), or whoever else's name happens to pop into his demented head at the time.

Dummy Mark, Resident Flamer Supreme and Bisexual No Coder, thinks Slow Code is K4YZ, but in Mark's world EVERY post comes from YZ. Mark has not mastered the fine art of reading headers.

I guess this does little to answer your question, but I'm sure that Mark Morgan will post ten, fifteen or twenty posts minimum in response. On some days Mark has made as many at 125 posts in as few as eight hours. It will be totally up to you to try to interpret what Mark says simply because he uses a strange dialect heretofore unseen in these groups.

If AB8MQ responds, his posts will be over anonymous sockpuppets, usually three or four, but his trademark will be that his posts all contain filthy comments that he cuts and pastes from one group to another. No originality there.

Good luck.

Yup, you are correctamundo Mark. K4YZ knows who all of us "raly" are and we email him behind the scenes just so we can corroborate and tell Slow Code, Billy Smith, Roger, and Dave to synchronize our Magic Decoder Rings for the next batch of emails detailing how we will make fun of you.

Did you know that we sometimes hide our secret messages in photos posted on your blog, www.marksspamblog.blogspot.com ?? Hiding messages in .jpg photos has been going on for years and even high school kids know how that works.

Of course our Magic Decoder Rings are better, Mark. All you need is a web cam and one of our rings. Easy process, too. Turn on the cam, hold the Magic Decoder Ring in front of the web cam (no more than two inches away) and our plots against you are instantly decoded for us to read.

Of course K4YZ does not "pund" on us...it is a conspiracy! A well orchestrated and carried out conspiracy!
I guess now that you are "on to us", we'd better buy some new boxes of Wheaties and get new Magic Decoder Rings. It is a setback, yes, but a minor one.

Darn...my Magic Decoder Ring just buzzed. I bet it is K4YZ trying to get in touch to outline our next conspiracy. Over and Out.

DeForest spelled his name with only one "r".

Vacuum tubes that could be used in 'practical' transmitters were not available in 1906. Nor an oscillator circuit. Those things took a few years to develop.

How do you know for sure, Len? Did you visit every transmitting station in the world?

The truth is that you don't know - you're just making things up. Maybe others adopted Fessenden's idea and failed. Or maybe they succeeded, but after a time lost interest and went on with other things.

You don't know for sure. All you know is that you haven't come across any documentation that someone else adopted Fessenden's idea.

Actually it cost about $10.

I've discussed much more of my amateur radio activities here. You weren't paying attention.

Have you forgotten the picture of my current station on my website? (I have several - AOL gives them out free. Len hasn't taken advantage of

So Edison made a mistake on that. I wasn't talking about him.

In the history of electrical engineering, all sorts of now-incredible things were once considered practical. That's a fact.

Current flow is opposite electron flow, Len. It's an engineering convention.

Still is. Current flows from positive to negative. Electrons go the other way.

Then why is it still the conventional representation in electrical engineering?

I don't. btw, the resceiver on the HBR website was built without them.

No, that's not true at all, Len.

For homebrew radio construction, they have a lot of uses:

- Holes for meters and displays
- Holes for connectors, ranging from SO-239 to DB-25
- Holes for chassis-mount components such as large electrolytic capacitors and flush-mount transformers
- Holes for ventilation

And much more. Of course those holes can be made other ways - Greenlee punches have never been essential tools. They're just nice to have and use.

> Greenlee is still a corporation in Rockford, IL, but they

That's incorrect. They make a wider line of chassis punches than ever before.

btw, the classic Adel nibbling tool is still in production.

That's nice, Len.

Is "artillery aiming information" somehow incorrect?

ENIAC had all the features needed to be the very first operational general-purpose electronic digital computer. And it was.

They were slow - at least an order of magnitude slower than ENIAC. They were not general purpose, either. Their technology led nowhere.

What does that have to do with ENIAC?

The point is that the ENIAC folks got the machine to work with the parts available.

No, it passed.

The Army accepted ENIAC, moved it to the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, and used it until 1955.
If it were not a 'practical' device, they would have simply abandoned
it or scrapped it.

The US Army abandoned and/or scrapped a lot of things in those days.
For example, a lot of material was destroyed or abandoned in place because it wasn't practical to bring it back to the USA. Projects were simply stopped. WW2 "surplus" was sold for pennies on the dollar just to get rid of it.

If ENIAC "flunked", why did the Army use it for at least 9 years?

> It went defunct.

After 1955, yes.

> One of a kind.

ENIAC was never duplicated. During its development, so much was learned that newer machines like EDSAC, EDVAC and ultimately the UNIVAC were designed, rather than repeat the ENIAC design.

> >By modern standards, or even those of 20, 30, or 40 years ago, ENIAC

> Try 51 years, not just 40 years ago.

51 years was 1955. ENIAC served the Army for at least 9 years (1946 to 1955). Say, that's longer than you claim to have served, Len! ;-)
;-) ;-)
>
> >But by the standards of its time, it was a tremendous advance.

Bought out by a larger company.

ENIAC was a tremendous advance. And it was practical, by the standards of its time.

> >Calculations that took weeks using pre-ENIAC methods could be done in Nope. I'm comparing calculating speeds.

You're telling me what to do, Len. You frequently tell people what to do, when they prove you wrong. What is wrong with live and let live?

> trying to compare humans operating Monroe or Friden desk

Why? Did you ever see a firing table calculation (not tabulation) done on ENIAC? Or do one by hand? Ever see the machine itself? Ever read the original papers on it?

> >The boundaries of "numerically hard"
> >calculation were pushed back enormously.

Irrelevant. The point is that the use of electronics by ENIAC increased the speed by orders of magnitude. No mechanical or electromechanical machine could hope to keep up.

Mechanical and electromechanical computing and calculating were rendered hopelessly obsolete by ENIAC's success. ENIAC caused the focus to move to purely electronic computing and calculating. Within a few years, commercial machines like UNIVAC were on the market. (A UNIVAC correctly predicted the outcome of the 1952 presidential election, based on just a few percent of the returns).

Yes, the Army paid for it.

No, it wasn't a "white elephant". It was practical and they used it.

The Army accepted ENIAC, moved it to the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, and used it until 1955.
If it were not a 'practical' device, they would have simply abandoned
it or scrapped it.

The US Army abandoned and/or scrapped a lot of things in those days.
For example, a lot of material was destroyed or abandoned in place because it wasn't practical to bring it back to the USA. Projects were simply stopped. WW2 "surplus" was sold for pennies on the dollar just to get rid of it.

If ENIAC was a "white elephant". why did the Army use it for at least 9 years?

They couldn't decalre it surplus because they were using it.

It's clear you're very jealous, Len.

But it's not practical any more.

Those machines can all trace their design right back to ENIAC - and not to any mechanical or electromechanical device.

Not general purpose, and not a computer.

So did I - several times.

When I ran the Philadelphia Independence Marathon, the finish line was in front of Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell.

Why must one prefer one over the other?

"Liberty is not a bell". And the way things are going, Liberty is slowly being eroded.

btw, the Liberty Bell is defunct for its original purpose (ringing).

"Minutiae" is the plural, Len.

I'll explain it again, Len:

In the history of electrical engineering, all sorts of now-incredible things were once considered practical. That's a fact.

ENIAC is just one example of how things that are now considered incredible were once practical.

Yes, eventually. How many times have they moved the date when NTSC TV will end? How many NTSC TV sets and other hardware are being sold today?

Yes - but most of the shows are still JUNK. The quality of the picture and sound doesn't make up for the lack of quality in the programming.

First time I've seen you wrote that.

Besides, if the test is gone, there's no reason to advocate for its elimination.

The question is what will you do without that obsession to fill your time?

You have advocated far more than simple elimination of the Morse Code test.

Just because you can find the names of some books by using google, doesn't mean you have ever read them, or understood them. I have copies of all three volumes of "Internetworking with TCP/IP- Client -Server Programming and Applications" by Douglas E. Comer, and David L. Stevens, Prentice Hall on my book shelf. (pick a page, any page, and I'll give you a quotation from it.)

If you note the copyright date of this series, you will see 1993. A mere 20 years after I started working with GE's world wide networks... top posting my email on model 33 teletypes with bell 103 modems.

Really? Well, I suppose you think that everyone had 56K connections back in the '70's. I worked in the Electrical Engineering department at the University of Maryland, back then, and we were pretty proud of our first 9600 baud connection between the PDP11's, and the Univac's that had the darpa connection. It wasn't until we got a VAX 11/780 that we got a 56K pipe to the Univac's that connected to the darpanet. That was around 1980. I think diapers were you most prominent media for communication back then.

Prior to usenet, a variation on email, we were using email broadcast lists. The same top posting rules applied.

Usenet came into being while I was in graduate school, around 1980-83. I remember there was quite a buzz at that time. Decwriters were 300 baud, and the most common affortable modems were still using the Bell 103 standard from the late '50s. 1200 baud modems were used for expensive applications, usually computer to computer data transfer. The 1200 baud modem didn't come into general use until DC Hayes produced an inexpensive model around 1983.

It was a real screamer compared to the Bell 103's.

I don't need to read about it, I was there doing it. My first exposure to a world wide network was GE's back around 1970. It was the first commercial use of a global network. The normal terminal to connect to that net was a Model 33 Teletype, with a bell 103 modem. I bet you think they used Windows based PC's with 56K modems, and Netscape.

You're not supposed to learn dits and dahs, any more than, in French class, you learn the letters of the alphabet. You're supposed to learn the words in CW. Anyone listening to the dits and dahs (dyslexic or not) will never gain any proficiency in CW.

>What's the fix for it?

Learn it by the sound, not by the individual element - the same way you'd learn any other language. See if a ham club near you has classes. If they do, see if the person teaching CW knows the difference between learning the dits and dahs and learning CW by sound. If s/he does, take the course.

I started teaching myself CW (as a kid) by individual letters. After using it on the air for a year (we had very little choice in those days - Gonsets were too expensive for most of us, and there weren't too many other ways to get on 2 meters) I was listening to the content, not the dits and dahs. I still have to "hear" the sound in my head when someone posts dots and dashes in a Usenet post - I never learned to "read" "written CW".

No it doesn't. There's something in there about the test actually testing for the thing it tests for.

Can you just imagine a totally blind from birth person "choosing", as a test for a job that requires color matching, a test to see if he can tell the difference between Braille labels on paintings? Or a "test" for someone who can't drive due to a disability consisting of testing his ability to hail a cab? A test for the ability to receive AND DECODE CW consists of your listening to, or seeing, CW! We don't test a translator's ability to translate French to English by giving him the English translation and seeing if he can "read" it.

That makes as much sense as a man insisting that it's sex discrimination to not hire him to model women's clothing - something that's been thrown out of the courts so many times it has permanent skid marks. Sue the FCC if you like, but make sure the courtroom doors are open or you'll get hurt when they throw your case out so fast the splinters will fly.

>> persnaly Id choose a code >>reader and would of course oviate the test all together. fairer still >>is stop dumbing down everyone in the service with test

Fairer still is to accept that there are a number of ways to get on the air, one of them being to prove a certain very low level of CW proficiency. (5 wpm isn't even reading CW, it's "decoding" individual dots and dashes.) Would you accept a blind person's insistence that he be allowed to travel the same way that you do - by driving his own car? After all, he's disabled, so he can choose whatever test he likes to get his driver's license. How about a test listening to someone talk and seeing if he can hear the speech?

>> that greatest >>physists of the last century could not pass if they wanted to ham I >>refer to Einstain Hawkings and Dirac

What has being a physicist to do with being a ham? But I'll go along with that - in order for you to keep your license you can skip the CW portion of the test, as long as you produce a PhD in physics. Deal? (BTW, Einstein, Dirac and Hawking weren't/aren't physicists. They were/are all mathematicians, although that's questionable in Einstein's case.)

Wrong. Here's part of Hawking's bio: "In March 1959 Hawking took the scholarship examinations with the aim of studying natural sciences at Oxford. He was awarded a scholarship, despite feeling that he had performed badly, and at University College he specialised in physics in his natural sciences degree. He only just made a First Class degree in 1962 and in [1] he explains how the attitude of the time worked against him:

"The prevailing attitude at Oxford at that time was very anti-work. You were supposed to be brilliant without effort, or accept your limitations and get a fourth-class degree. To work hard to get a better class of degree was regarded as the mark of a grey man - the worst epithet in the Oxford vocabulary.

"From Oxford, Hawking moved to Cambridge to take up research in general relativity and cosmology, a difficult area for someone with only a little mathematical background."
(From http://www.gap-system.org/~history/Biographies/Hawking.html)

From http://archive.ncsa.uiuc.edu/Cyberia/NumRel/EinsteinLegacy.html:
"Einstein's college record as an unenthusiastic student is fairly well known. So, too, his independence and questioning of authority, all of which may have prevented him from landing an entry-level academic position once he graduated in 1900 with a degree in physics."

From http://nobelprize.org:
"In 1909 (Einstein) became Professor Extraordinary at Zurich, in 1911 Professor of Theoretical Physics at Prague, returning to Zurich in the following year to fill a similar post. In 1914 he was appointed Director of the Kaiser Wilhelm Physical Institute and Professor in the University of Berlin."

So both Hawking and Einstein were trained as physicists, and had the equivalent of a minor in mathematics. Only Dirac (originally an electrical engineer) had a major degree in mathematics.

No. There is NO historical record of ANY broadcasting station USING that single-high-power-special-carbon-microphone "modulator" that you claim is "practical."

>The truth is that you don't know - you're just making things up. Maybe

The "truth" is that you are pissed, want to rationalize your previous claim of "practicality" and are trying to side-pedal onto some area where you can rail at the challengers, saying the challengers LIE.

>You don't know for sure. All you know is that you haven't come across >any documentation that someone else adopted Fessenden's idea.

All I know is that NO ONE seems to have documented it... and there has been LOTS of documentation about broadcasting for all of its existance...from manufacturers to users.

Feel free to post ANY source that claims to have used Reggie's brute-force modulator of a single-high-power-special-carbon-microphone "modulator" that you say is "practical."

Why don't you write some of the 50 KW AM broadcasters and suggest this "practical" idea? Try KMPC here in San Fernando Valley. 50 KW RF output into three towers.
Do you know of any carbon microphone maker that sells a FIFTY KILOWATT MICROPHONE? Can you engineer one?

How about the studio people at KMPC? Would you like to tell them that, for "practical" reasons, they all have to cluster around a SINGLE microphone that is passing 50 KW of RF energy? Hmmm? The studio MUST be moved to the transmitter site unless you can figure out some way for the SINGLE microphone to exist in present studios yet handle the 50 KW RF from the transmitter and back out to the antenna.

>> So much for your redefinition of "practical."

I think (no "seem" about it) that you dribbled out some nonsense about your radio hero's "practical" thing and a lot of NON-thinking.

are-better-superiority.

It was already reviewed by three who were THERE, plus a civilian engineer who worked there for both the USA and USAF. Several others who were THERE, including a USAF MSgt who worked at Kashiwa after the USAF took it over have looked at the final copy FIRST. A draft copy went with the CD containing photos about Hardy

Barracks to a Pacific Stars and Stripes journalist in Tokyo. That journalist supplied some extra data which was incorporated into the final version.

I was in the Army at the time, NOT the USAF. Didn't need to compute any air distances of possible enemy aircraft directions. Are you going to say there was "no danger" from the USSR in the early 1950s?!? Go tell that to the Far East Command folks...now the USARPAC based at Fort Shafter, HI.

Speaking of "distances," want to give the distance to the moon again like you did the first time? :-)

You don't...because you NEVER CHECK. All you do is say I am "in error" (LIE). I have the third-party documentation, was there.

You were never there. You never served in any military.

Ten dollars is LESS THAN $100.

If it only cost "$10" then I've only mentioned a large HF communications station ten times... :-)

You have to get your money for that Orion somewhere else.

You can't design an Orion clone by yourself? :-)

Is it? :-) Have you cracked a NEW text published after two decades ago? :-)

Are you going to explain "current flow" from the faceplate of a CRT back to the cathode? :-)

Tsk. Out came the knuckle-spanking ruler again! :-)

I have lots of old engineering texts which refer to the glowing part of vacuum tubes as 'filaments.'

More than I have old engineering texts which talk about "current flow."

Are you now going to whip out some hydro engineering texts and explain that "current flow" goes uphill in a stream? :-)

Amazing!

But, UNIVAC was not ENIAC. :-)

Yawn.

Oh, my, not to Alfred Boole? :-)

Not to Von Neuman? Not to hundreds of thousands like Bardeen, Brattain, and Shockley? Or Jack Kilby?
Or the innovator of the floppy disk mass storage device (whoever did that first)?

Right you are, Mr. Computer Guru. Nothing about "Harvard" architecture, "pipelining", bilateral digital switching, standardized logic levels, RAM, ROM, EPROM, or BINARY registers instead of the BCD variant ENIAC used. Modern computers "trace their design right back to ENIAC?" Noooooooo.

Try as hard as I can, I can't find ANY relatively modern computer that needs 6SN7s (a dual triode, octal base), not even 12AU7s. The last vacuum tube used with computers was the CRT and that's quickly going away...

>> ENIAC is defunct. Liberty is NOT.

I think of LIBERTY and FREEDOM in the larger sense, but than YOU did. You NEVER served...any military.

It's just a SURNAME, Jimmie, for "E. F. Johnson."

E. F. Johnson made a LOT of different radios. Which one do you think I have?

Have you seen the E. F. Johnson mobile transceivers they have now? Much more compact than the Viking Messenger.

Here's a plain and simple fact: You LIE, Jimmie.

I have explained what I will do many times. So many times that I might juggle a few words to make it look a bit different. The INTENT and MEANING is still the same.

>Besides, if the test is gone, there's no reason to advocate for its Golleee, Gomer, you finally figured that out all by yourself?

BWAAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

>The question is what will you do without that obsession to fill your

What "obsession?" :-)

Changing federal laws and regulations is a POLITICAL matter. I am active in politics, many things, but none are "obsessions." ["obsessions" like the religious affection for a defunct computer]

>You have advocated far more than simple elimination of the Morse Code >test.

How about that? :-)

Elimination of the morse code test was NEVER "simple." :-)

To do so would mean the End of the World As Morsemen Knew It!

Morse code testing is practically a Religious Rite to all morsemen, ending it is like defaming God, a Heresy with a capital H. :-)

But, as always to you, ByteBrothers famous phrase invoked.

Not "I," old soldier-statesman, what we in the battalion did. 8235th Army Unit.

It's for historical interest purposes. The only other one (a much larger one) is at www.usarmygermany.com that was put together by Walter Elkins about the Signal effort in Europe.

If you sneer too much at the My3Years.pdf, then feel free to substitute AlphabetSoup.pdf, a copy of my battalion's own production of its mission tasks circa 1962. That courtesy of Mr. James Brendage, a retired civilian engineer who worked at ADA when I was serving there.

If you don't like either of those, then substitute either one of the two remaining, one on microwave radio relay, the other on the SCR-300, both from a technical standpoint.
The SCR-300 was the first walkie-talkie, a backpack VHF transceiver, introduced during WW2, designed and built by Galvin Mfg (later to be renamed Motorola).

It's all about RADIO and COMMUNICATIONS.

>Your ADA sojourn began about fifty-three years back, didn't it, Len?
>Why do you live in the past so much?

1. I live for the now and the future, not the past.

2. There is no copyright restriction on government works, therefore no need to get written permission.

3. There is no security classification on the material I've presented...neither from the DoD nor private company non-disclosure agreements.

Are you on commission from Greenlee? :-)

No sweat, old soldier-statesman, I've been IN Greenlee on a visit, have seen the little corner of one building where two guys were making punches and files.

Send your download to Lowes or Home Depot corporate headquarters, see if they are interested.

I still have old Greenlee chassis punches from before the 60s, still wrapped in oily paper, get checked now and then for rust. They were all used decades ago...only two have been reground on the edges (did that myself, no problem).

Not much use for those punches now in the solid-state era.
Especially when there are so many KITS available for those who claim to design their own. :-)

>> before WW2. Its treatment is heavy on broadcasting, light on amateurs >> and nonbroadcasting commercial operation. IMHO.
>
>But Len refers to it as if it is the Bible.

Not at all. Thomas H. White's radio history in the USA is large, illustrated, and readily accessible on the web. It was mentioned only because of its accessibility.

McGraw-Hill's ELECTRONICS magazine of April 17, 1980, had a special commemorative Issue on their 50th anniversary.
Volume 53, Number 9, 650 pages, excellent overview with many details, photographs from before Marconi's time to 1980. They didn't emphasize amateur radio because amateur radio was really a small player in that bigger game of electronics technology. Unless one was a subscriber to Electronics magazine or has access to a technical library, it isn't that easy to use as a reference.

Hugh G. J. Aitken's "The Continuous Wave: Technology and American Radio," 1900-1932, Princeton University Press, 1985, 588 pages, soft cover, is a scholarly work, quite complete and sponsored by the National Science Foundation. Again, there isn't the highlighting of amateur radio a la ARRL but that is for the real reason that amateur radio wasn't considered a 'big player' in the technological development of radio.

Aitken's earlier work, "Syntony and Spark: The Origins of Radio" was done in 1976, reprinted in 1985 by Princeton University Press. I don't have that handy at the moment so I can't describe its size but it is another soft-cover. Neither is readily available except from a technical library.

What some amateurs call "The Collins Sideband Book," or "Single Sideband Principles and Circuits," Pappenfus, Bruene, and Schoenike, McGraw-Hill Book Company, 1964, 382 pages, has a good bit of HF communications history in Chapter 1 up to copyright date of the book, more in following chapters on various early SSB systems.

A veritable cornucopia of radio-electronics historical information can be found on dozens of websites that don't inwardly focus just on amateur radio. One can start with the links listing at http://sujan.hallikainen.org down towards the bottom of the "Broadcast History" main page. Harold Hallikainen is a licensed radio amateur, by the way. From those links can be found much history of communications and electronics, even military such as Walter Elkins' www.usarmygermany.com website (huge, detailed history of post-WW2 US Army history in USAEUR). If you need to see a direct copy of US Army in the Far East circa 1962, download my Military (page) upload of http://sujan.hallikainen.org/BroadcastHistory/uploads/AlphabetSoup.pdf. For things like the telecommunications infrastructure there are several sites about this service that is supposed to "fail" at every emergency (according to some popular but erroneous myths among some hams) such as the transcontinental microwave radio relay system by AT&T that was, developments of microwave vacuum tubes, slow-scan TV (other than amateur experiments), cellular telephony, indeed nearly every facet of "the telephone company." It might be noted that the microwave radio relay system was an integral part of US defense communications in the decades before 1980...which is opposite of the "always fails" claim of the infrastructure accusers. Some of that includes the Western Electric Company early work that helped bring the early vacuum tube into a reproducible, reliable product.

At the IEEE website under "Milestones" (in electronics and electrical power distribution) is a number of firsts ("milestones") in technology, the where-when-who of each one. The IEEE spoken histories include interviews with many of the movers-and-shakers, major to minor, of the electronics industry, military, and aerospace field. For other history there is the Radio Club of America, the first membership organization in the USA and still organized, containing a number of biographies of notable radio pioneers and their work plus early radio sites and stories. At the Corning Frequency Control website (now acquired by another corporation ? and may have its URL altered) is several papers on the history of quartz crystal production in the USA before, during, and after WW2 by participants in that work. There exist a great number of websites on nearly all phases of electronics and radio, done by individuals or groups who have been there and done that without any "necessity" of first getting an amateur radio license, then being a part of the industry. Everything from a history of radio comms in California state and local police (many photos) to a specialty site about the SCR-300 walkie-talkie done by the son of the chief designer at Galvin (later Motorola). A New Jersey historical group has an extensive coverage of the Coles, Evans, and Squier Laboratories very near Fort Monmouth, NJ, the to-be-abandoned site of the US Army Electronics Command...included in that is a large description of the very first "moonbounce" dubbed Project Diana that took place just after WW2 ended.

The number of places to get historical information on electronics (including radio) is immense on the Internet. It seems that many, many individuals have an INTEREST in the whole sphere of the technology without having to "get a ham license first." They were IN it before being told they HAD to get that "first permission to enter" from some blowhard control-freak ham.

> He usually follows one of >those references with some sniping at the American Radio Relay League.

There is no denying that the publications output of the ARRL is very large. They must do that in order to get the income necessary to perform all their "free" services to members. The ARRL has a virtual monopoly on amateur-interest publications in the USA...no denying that, either.

But, the ARRL is also a political organization, maintaining both a legal firm and a lobbying organization in DC on retainer. As a political entity, they come under the good old American tradition of being a target for anyone who cares to comment. The League is NOT without fault...except in the minds of its faithful followers, the disciples of the Church of St. Hiram.

Having a virtual monopoly on radio-amateur-interest publications also gives them a psychological power to mold readers' opinions to those of the League hierarchy.
To deny that is to deny the power of marketing techniques, of psychological propaganda activities that go on daily in nearly all human activities.

No. "Profiles" work both ways. Heil and Miccolis have both been "profiled" in here, not just by me but by many others. It is the Nature of the (newsgroup) Beast.

>Len seldom lets the truth get in the way of one of his monologues.

Tsk, Heil speaks an untruth.

OPINIONS are not "facts," just opinions.

Miccolis tries to manuever all opinion statements as "facts" written by those he has problems with...thus garnering the "accusations" of "untruth" or "error" when some just plain don't like him. That he often comes across as an arch-typical "mother superior" (complete with spanking ruler) is lost on him. Prissy, as if sucking on sourballs when writing up "error" "error" on those disagreeing with him.

Heil comes across as a stereotypical WW2 propaganda movie Waffen SS officer, ordering others around, telling them what they "should" do (his way, naturally). One can almost see the sneer on his face, the monocle ready to drop as his face gets more livid with order-barking, the heels clicking.

>I've noticed the talk of his workshop, but nothing about what comes out >of it.

Why should it? It is for MY enjoyment for myself, not some "hey-look-at-me-and-what-marvelous-things-I've-done" self promotion on some website. :-)

I've had it for four decades. Those I know have been in it and we've talked mutual interest stuff about any project then on-going. Material like that has been exchanged privately. No need to make it public.

>All vine, no fruit.

Southern California is not an ideal place for vinyards;
mid-state is best: Napa, Sonoma, Mendocino Counties.
California produces most of the wine consumed in the USA.

Southern California climate is good for citrus. My 35-year-old lemon tree bears lemons all year around. The dwarf orange hybrid is almost as productive.

>For sure. SS is coming up fairly soon.

"Waffen?" Jahwhol! [click, click] :-)

Now if by "words" you mean the collection of dits and dahs that make up an individual letter, I totally agree with you. One should never resort to counting dits and dahs. However, IMHO, the next step to recognizing words (ie groups of letters) comes with time and a lot of experience. I would also agree that until one can copy "words" by sound, that there will be a certain speed limit that you will not get past: For me that wall has been around 20 wpm or so, depending on the quality of the sent code.

FWIW, I have a hell of a time copying code a slow character speeds: < 10wpm character speed. At this speed, I no longer hear the 'sound of the letter', only a bunch of dits and dahs. I find myself playing each collection of dits and dahs back in my head at a higher speed --- bizzare. I first learned slow code with farnsworth (21 wpm character speed) and longer inter character spaces to give the effective slower WPM rates. Increasing speed involved reducing the inter character space time.

One could test using light rather than sound if the disability were auditory in nature. Or by feel --- with a vibrating device delivering the dits and dahs.

Part 97.509(k) The administering VEs must accommodate an examinee whose physical disabilities require a special examination procedure. The administering VEs may require a physician's certification indicating the nature of the disability before determining which, if any, special procedures must be used.

If one looks at the Basis and Purpose for the government licensing Amatures, I am not sure I see much justifcation for continuing the CW testing. I am a KNOW CODEer. It took me a LONG time to learn code. It was one of the hardest things I have had to learn. It is still hard for me: Although it is my preferred operating mode. I must like pain. I do see the requirement of learning code to be good for THE HOBBY: It introduces new hams to a fun part of the hobby they might not therwise find out about. Though I am not sure it is the role of the FCC to do what is best for THE HOBBY.

since you seem to be a mode to listen let me try Itis my understanding and beliefnthat the Mandate legaly of the FCC is to serve the interest of the PUBLIC in all of it regs (at least that is the thery)

Therfore in my If some one made the case that Code testing was good for the ARS they have NOT finished the job for making it a requirement
